Samuel Weyman Killed in Fall, Fighting Fire

BODY OF VICTIM FOUND AT FOOT OF EMBANKMENT

Death Comes While Prominent Businessman Attempts to Check Fire in Nearby Woods.

SONS, DAUGHTERS ASSIST IN FIGHT

Return to Home Thinking Father Already There, to Find He Had Not Arrived.

Samuel T. Weyman, president of Weyman & Connors, president of the City Savings Bank to his Trust Company, and one of Atlanta's best known men, was instantly killed Thursday night at his estate on the Howell Mill road by an accidental fall over an embankment, while he, a daughter and two sons were engaged in fighting a small forest fire.

Mr. Weyman and his family had just finished their supper when they discovered that a fire was raging in the woods, a part of their sixty-acre estate, some distance from the home.

The father, two of his sons, Samuel and Betsy, and a daughter, Miss Betsy, decided to try to put out the blaze. The two boys entered one automobile and Miss Betsy and her father a second car and drove to the scene.

While they were fighting the blaze with brush, the four became separated. After some time they heard a car drive off and believed that Mr. Weyman had returned to his home.

After Sam and Fontaine had beaten out the blaze they entered the car in which they had driven to the fire and went back home. There they found that their sister also had returned. The sons thought the father with their sister, and the sister thought he had returned with her brother.

A searching party was organized at once and began its work in the pitch dark. Soon the body was found. It was discovered at the foot of a forty-five-foot embankment on Wesley avenue. Death apparently had been instantaneous, the result of a fractured skull.

The accident occurred about 8 o'clock at night. The sky was overcast and it was impossible to see more than a few feet ahead. It is believed that Mr. Weyman did not know he was near the embankment, which in 1890 he came to Atlanta and had lived here ever since. He entered the investment banking business with George V. Connors, this connection lasting until his death. In 1890 he married Miss Bennie Fontaine, of Columbus, who survives him.

Mr. Weyman was one of the founders of the Atlantic Steel Company, which was first known as the Atlanta Steel Hoop Company. He always was active in civic enterprises which served for the betterment of the community.

He had been a member of St. Luke's Episcopal church ever since he came to Atlanta.

The keyhole was completely surrounded by a drawing room door and Justice Hill allowed the whole door to be placed in evidence upon the plea of counsel that there was a question of observations having been made through the keyhole and that the jury might like to test its possibilities for themselves.

DRIVERLESS CAR FIGURES IN CRASH

Baby Critically Injured in Collision After Autoist Is Tossed From Machine in Rounding Curve

A Thanksgiving Day outing was turned into a possible tragedy for an Atlanta home Thursday night, when a 14-month-old baby girl was critically injured by her parents and an older sister injured in an automobile crash five miles southwest of Buford when the car in which they were driving was struck from the rear by a driverless machine careening down upon them at terrific speed.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Herring, of 337 Mayson avenue, accompanied by their two children, Ruby, age 3, and Louise, 14 months, had been to Buford for the day to visit relatives. They were returning shortly before dark and were five miles out upon the Buford-Lawrenceville highway towards Atlanta when the accident occurred.

Driver Thrown Out.

A car being driven in the opposite direction by George Dickey, negro, of 140 Butler street, Atlanta, attempted to negotiate a sharp curve at a high rate of speed, it is said. The driver lost control of his machine, which plunged towards the side of the road and turned over. The car was flung free of the car, which then righted itself and continued to plunge down the highway, striking the Herring car.

Louise received a fractured skull and died at the peak of death at Grady hospital. The child was rushed there by the Glydon Tapp ambulance of Buford. Her sister and mother received cuts about the head and face while Herring, who was driving the car, suffered serious hurt to his right leg.

The accident was reported to police headquarters here by Patrolman W. F. Allen.

Dickey was arrested by Gwinnett county authorities and is being questioned. No definite charge has been placed against him, pending a complete investigation and an outcome of the child's condition. He suffered nothing worse than bruises from being thrown from his machine.

Three Are Injured.

Ridley G. Smith, of Hill street, S. E., his mother, Mrs. Glen R. Smith, and his son, Ridley Jr., were taken to Georgia Baptist hospital Thursday night for treatment of injuries received when the automobile driven by Smith, collided with another car at the intersection of North Boulevard and Irwin street.

The driver of the machine which struck his auto did not stop, Smith said, and he did not know whether the driver was white or black. The crash occurred on a busy street.

Mrs. Smith received a possible fracture of her right arm, Smith severe cuts about his hands, and Ridley Smith, 10, received slight injuries about the head.

An automobile crash at the intersection of North Boulevard and Irwin street Thursday night resulted in slight injuries to A. R. Shumate, of 31 Democrat drive, driver of a Buick sedan, and his wife, Virginia Shumate, of 1120 Euclid avenue. Clyde Jones, of 90 Kensington street, N. E., was the driver of the machine which struck Shumate's car.

After treatment at Grady hospital, Cofer was docketed at headquarters on a charge of drunkenness, and Shumate was jailed for operating an automobile while intoxicated by Call Officers M. D. Cartwright and S. B. Satterthwaite.

Michael Farmer, 39-year-old son of Mrs. Ira Farmer, 97 Ponce de Leon avenue, who was struck by a hit-and-run driver Wednesday night was taken to Grady hospital Thursday night for treatment of injuries received when the car suddenly appeared and that he had his choice of striking it or the post. In the crash both received minor cuts and bruises.

TAR AND FEATHERS COATING IS GIVEN CARDIAN DOCTOR

Son of Former Premier of Dominion, Accused of Offense, Is Freed on Bond.

PENITENTON, B. C., Nov. 28.—(AP) Charles E. Oliver, son of former Canadian Premier John Oliver, was at liberty today on bail charged with tarring and feathering Dr. V. E. Latimer, formerly of Brandon, Manitoba, against whom Oliver had brought many charges, the nature of which the police did not make public.

Police said Joseph Oliver, Vancouver lawyer and brother of the accused man, had brought similar charges against Dr. Latimer and had been advised the police were powerless to act.

Dr. Latimer came into the provincial police station last night dripping tar and with the lower portion of his body covered with feathers, and swore out a warrant for Oliver. He said he was charged with the tarring and feathering of Dr. Latimer and had been advised the police were powerless to act.

Dr. Latimer said that on a lonely spot about 2 1/2 miles from Penitenton his trousers and underwear were removed and he was left with a thought, and tar and feathers applied to his body. The three men drove off and the doctor was forced to walk back to the police station with only his overcoat for covering. A physician found him suffering from shock and a badly swollen jaw.

Oliver did not plead to the charge and was set for Monday.

In red paint the words "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here," were inscribed on the side of the car. He was in his office three weeks ago. This note was mentioned in the local press at the time and was attributed to some practical joker.

Woman Is Gagged And Robbed Twice Within Two Days

Aged Victim Is Taken From Her Bed by Negro, Tied and Left in Closet of Her Residence.

Taken from her bed, where she had been confined several years, and bound, gagged and robbed by the same negro burglar for the second time in as many days, Mrs. Sally C. Perry, 90 years old, of 94 Hensley street, was found Thursday afternoon in a semi-conscious condition in a linen closet of her home by a neighbor.

The aged woman, who has lived alone since the death of her husband more than a year ago, was first robbed Tuesday afternoon as she lay in bed, barely able to move.

Forcing her to tell where her money—$8 in currency—was hidden, the bandit lifted her from the bed and carried her to a closet, obtained the money and left her on the floor—securely bound.

Aided By Women

The aged woman had been provided for by a number of prominent Atlanta women since the death of her husband. After the first attack these patrons of the old woman and their friends called upon the police to place a guard around the home to prevent a recurrence of the attack.

Two officers went to the home and made a short investigation and then left. Thursday when they returned to the home a second time they found that the robber had arrived before them.

This time the bandit followed the same procedure as on the first visit, except that, according to Mrs. Perry, he did not gag her. He picked her up, bound and gagged her, took one dollar—all she had—and then chained the door of the closet to assure him plenty of time to escape.

Detectives J. M. Austin and W. J. Anderson guarded the home Thursday night.

Friends of the aged victim believed that she was in need of hospital treatment and she was taken to Grady hospital. She was released on Monday, but balance was sent to the home for her.

Refuses to Leave Home

Mrs. Perry absolutely refused to go to the hospital, despite all pleadings of the doctors. "I'm going to stay right here and die in my own home," she said. According to her story, the negro hit her over the head during one of his visits, and she believes that her death will result from the blow.

Mrs. Perry is well educated, and it is evident that she comes from a good family. She stated that she is connected with some of the best-known people in Atlanta. She was first married to James Holliman, who died shortly after the Civil War. Then she married James Perry, of Wrightboro. She has been living in the same home, bought by the savings of her husband and herself, for 39 years.

AMERICAN WOMAN MISSIONARY TAKEN BY CHINA BANDITS

Assistant Chief John Terrell Expected To Be Named Fire Chief by Council This Afternoon.

HANKOW, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Bandits today kidnapped Mrs. Oscar Helstead, an American Lutheran missionary, at Sinyeh, southwest Honan province. Mrs. Helstead has been a missionary in China 20 years.

The American consulate has demanded that the nationalist government take action to gain Mrs. Helstead's release.

Besides Mrs. Helstead, another American missionary, the Rev. Ulrich Kreutzen, of Calumet, Mich., was kidnapped by central China bandits this month.

Kreutzen, attached to the Francis mission at Wuchang, stated in a letter received Wednesday at Wuchang, that he was being held in the mountains south of Tayeh, Hupeh province, for ransom of 6,000 Mexican dollars. His death was threatened by his captors, he said, if his rescue was attempted.

VICTIM FORMER STUDENT

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Oscar Helstead, an American missionary at Sinyeh, China, reported in Hankow dispatches as having been kidnapped by bandits, is a former student of St. Olaf College at Northfield, Minn.

Her husband, also a graduate of St. Olaf and the Lutheran Seminary here, is treasurer of the Lutheran Union Mission in China.

Mrs. and Mr. Helstead are serving in China under the direction of the Lutheran church which has headquarters here. They return to Minneapolis on furlough every seventh year.

UNBEATEN, UNTIED SEASON CLOSED BY TIDE WAVE

Georgia and Tech Show Great Power in Contests Against Ancient Grid-iron Foes.

OGLETHORPE LOSES TO 'NOOGA, 16 TO 6

Kentucky's Tying of Mighty Vols Keeps Tennessee From Undisputed Title of Conference.

There was a lot of scurrying about and surprising advancing of the football by conference teams that swung into action Thursday in some of Dixie's finest and most ancient of traditional football games.

Those very wild Wildcats of the University of Kentucky, upholding the honor of the famed Bluegrass, clawed and tore at the famous Volunteers of Tennessee to snatch a 6-6 tie and the 1929 conference title which was dangling before the eyes of the Knoxville outfit.

At Birmingham Georgia charged on Alabama like Pickett's forces up the slope at Gettysburg and the damage was just about as appalling. The Bulldogs, rated as outsiders, dove where our best teams had feared to ram, and went through Alabama's line to score a 19 to 0 victory.

Here at home, before 16,000, Tech showed more power and drive to defeat a stubborn Auburn Tiger by 19 to 6. Auburn fought every step of the way and Tech made a time-subbing the arched Plains crew.

OGLETHORPE BEATEN.

Oglethorpe, conqueror of Georgia, and victor over several strong northern teams, was trampled in its season's finale with the University of Chattanooga. The score was 16 to 6. From all that one can tell Chattanooga bottled up Cy Bell and the rest of the Petrel lacks and flung them in the river. Oglethorpe was upstaged by the lighter Tennessee, which partially accounts for the loss.

Now that the obstreperous Wildcats have performed the same trick that they did a year ago—tied Tennessee—the conference seems to have been made safe for Tulane. The Green Wave, in its annual game with the Louisiana State Tigers, rolled and sloshed to a 21 to 0 victory.

That gives Tulane a clean record for the season—no defeat, no tie. The opposition, some of the expert figure, has not been as strong as that of Tennessee. But the figures would indicate Tulane. That will have to be argued out, as the conference has nothing, in an official way, to do with yearly champions. It looks like a big winter in Knoxville and New Orleans made the surprising total of two first downs during the game, and none of them until the final quarter. Kentucky's big, heavy line was stopping the lighter Tennessee forwards and smothering McEver and Hackman. McEver, one of the big guns of the south, was held to a gain of 16 yards. Bobby Dodd, the wizard quarterback, kept Tennessee in the football game with his wonderful kicking.

It was quite an interesting Thanksgiving Day in Dixie. It left some of the football people feeling rather sad, but it just proves that you can't win all the time.

Thanksgiving Perfect Day For Atlanta

City Celebrates as Sun Breaks Through Cloud Riffs.

Atlanta Thursday observed the day with thankfulness—but in the main Atlantans were thankful for the river clouds through which the sunlight poured to cheer them on the myriad quests of their holiday season.

From a meteorological point of view Thanksgiving was a perfect day. It dawned fair and clear, the thermometer poised at a comfortable 60, which knew neither heat nor cold. There was briskness in the air, the kind that puts wings on the feet of a man who carries a gun across the day. It livens the throngs assembled in football stadiums and gives color and romance to the streets and roads and open fields.

It was the first time in weeks that Atlantans, carefree of business and household worries, had had such a day in which to enjoy themselves. With a zeal and an enthusiasm that bespoke their gratitude they went about that very thing.

From early morning the streets and highways were crowded. Families, couples and groups of odd sizes were on the roads, drinking in the invigorating air and basking in the sunshine. In the fields and woods were others, hiking through the glory of the fall woods, or hunting. The frequent reports of shotguns, from one end of this section to the other, showed that these latter had their fun.

Nor did Atlanta forget in its holiday mood, the purpose of the day. In the morning, when church services were held, thousands knelt in reverent prayer, or thanksgiving.

Through the day, on the town's business streets, the tranquility of a Sabbath prevailed. An occasional couple roamed the streets, window-shopping. The restaurants and cafeterias, where Thanksgiving dinners were served, were crowded to capacity. And at the theaters long lines of people waited entrance into the crowded auditoriums.

At noon time, in homes of high and low estate, the traditional turkey dinner was served. With dressing, cranberry sauce and all the customary trimmings, epicurean Atlanta satiated itself.

In Grant field, in the afternoon, the lusty warriors of Georgia Tech and Auburn renewed their quarrel before throngs that filled the stadium.

There were other pursuits to which Atlantans devoted themselves, too numerous to name. For the full period of the daytime and on into the night they enjoyed themselves, feasting, playing, dancing or doing whatever came into their minds. It was a happy day, one of the happiest Atlanta has known, and happier still that the trigger must have hit against a bush, causing the gun to discharge.

OFFICER WRIGHT DIES SUDDENLY OF HEART ATTACK

Patrolman J. A. Wright, for ten years a member of the Atlanta police department, died suddenly late Thursday night at the residence, 1004 Pulaski street. The officer had performed his usual duties Thursday and members of the family said he appeared in his usual good health just before he was stricken with a heart attack. He died before medical attention could be summoned.

He came to Atlanta from Dallas, Texas, where he was a member of the police department there. His father, Charles Wright, is a member of the Atlanta force.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Working Man's Wife Dubbed "Busiest Business Executive"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(United News.)—The wife of the working man is the greatest, busiest business executive in the world, Secretary of Labor Davis said in a radio speech tonight.

"The problem of feeding a family of eight, including several growing boys and a husky man in this present age, is almost enough to dishearten anyone, but the working wife tackles the situation like a football hero, and she gets there every time," she said.

"The problem of feeding a family of eight, including several growing boys and a husky man in this present age, is almost enough to dishearten anyone, but the working wife tackles the situation like a football hero, and she gets there every time," she said.

"She may not be a saint, a queen or a goddess. Sometimes she gets tired and cross. Why not, considering the load on her shoulders. As we add up her list of occupations—wife, mother, nurse, housekeeper, cook, laundress, seamstress, shopper, financier, master of every trade—we gaze at her in wonder and admiration."

COLD WAVE SEEN IN ATLANTA TODAY; SNOW IS LIKELY

No sooner was Thanksgiving over, and an ideal day it turned out to be, than the weatherman predicts a drop in the mercury, with rain and, not unlikely, some snow for today.

Thursday's temperature was all that could be wished for a holiday. It was cold enough, but not too cold, for football and outdoor sports.

Director C. F. von Herrmann says that the thermometer will tumble to 35 this morning and range between there and 40 all day. A cold wave in the Colorado region and north is working this way, he added.

U. S. Officials Sidestep Question of Ownership Of Land in Antarctic

Proverbial "Soft Answer" Given to Britain After Empire Expresses "Interest" in Byrd's Work.

BY C. P. WILLIAMSON, Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The question of ownership of lands in the antarctic, raised by the British government after Commander Richard Byrd started his expedition into the south polar regions has been temporarily sidestepped by the American government.

November 17, a year ago, the British government—in a polite but firm note to the United States—said "His Majesty's governments in the various countries of the empire have watched with special interest the progress of the expedition on account of the interest" which they themselves take in the regions where they understood Commander Byrd would conduct the bulk of his research.

The note recalled that the entire question had been discussed at the imperial conference of 1926, a copy of the proceeding having been transmitted to the state department. Joseph P. Cotton, under secretary of state, last November 15, acknowledged the note through the British embassy, expressing the regrets of the state department that an acknowledgment had been so long delayed and appreciation of the Byrd expedition.

Cotton added that since the report of the imperial conference on the matter had merely been brought to the attention of the department for information, "no comment seemed to be called for at this time."

An immediate consideration of the ownership of the lands in the antarctic in which Byrd is exploring was averted by the department.

The official summary of the proceedings of the imperial conference in 1926 was:

"The British policy in the antarctic. The question of antarctic exploration was discussed between representatives of the governments interested. There are certain areas in these regions to which a British title already exists by virtue of discovery. These areas include:

"(I.) The outlying part of coasts land, viz., the portion not comprised within the Falkland islands dependencies.

"(II.) Enderby land.

"(III.) Kemp land.

"(IV.) Queen Mary land.

"(V.) The area which lies to the west of Adelle land and which on its discovery by the Australian antarctic expedition in 1929 was denominated Wilkes land.

"(VI.) King George V land.

"(VII.) Oates land.

The representatives of the governments concerned studied the information available concerning these areas with special reference to their possible utilization for further developing exploration and scientific research in the antarctic regions."

GRIEF REPLACES HOLIDAY SPIRIT IN TWO HOMES

CARRIER HILLS, Ill., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Grief and unhappiness supplanted the spirit of the holiday in two Carrier Hills homes today—the aftermath of an argument over when to hold a school Thanksgiving program. Leslie Lightfoot, 33, school district director and teacher, was dead and Dwight Organ, 26, teacher, was held in the Saline county jail in Harrisburg, charged with slaying Lightfoot. Lightfoot and two other directors of the school district decided the Thanksgiving program should be given Friday evening. Mrs. Lightfoot was asked to convey this decision to Organ. Organ discredited the message from Lightfoot and called a meeting of the school district directors in a cafe Tuesday night. At the meeting Lightfoot is said to have asked Organ why he questioned the message; an argument followed, in which Lightfoot, witnesses said, struck Organ, who in turn drew a revolver and fired twice into Lightfoot's body.

THIN ICE BREAKS, DROWNING THREE MAINE CHILDREN

AUGUSTA, Maine, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Three small children drowned after they fell through thin ice on Two-Mile brook, near here today. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Parlin, nearly lost their own lives in their attempts to rescue them. The children were Beatrice, aged 5; Irene, 6, and Catherine Alberta, 8. Mrs. Nellie Parlin, in a critical condition from shock and exposure, may not recover. She was dragged from the icy water by her 13-year-old son, Levitt, one of the nine Parlin children.

FOUL PLAY IS SEEN IN FARMER'S DEATH

Bruised Body of Jess Camp Found in Ditch Near Powder Springs.

POWDER SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 28.—(Special)—Mystery surrounds the finding near here today about noon of the body of Jess Camp, 35, prominent farmer living a few miles from town.

Camp's body was discovered by friends lying in a ditch near the Rock Mountain road. Bruises and scars about the body, while not severe enough to preclude the theory of natural death after a fall, lent color to a suggestion that Camp was probably the victim of foul play.

A coroner's jury empaneled this afternoon examined the body and two witnesses and returned a verdict that Camp came to his death from causes unknown to it. Dr. F. P. Lindley was unable to say whether or not there had been foul play.

Camp was a man of excellent habits, according to close friends. The funeral will be held at the Rock Mountain cemetery Friday afternoon. He is survived by two children.

SHIPS RETURN TO PORT FOLLOWING COLLISION

British and American Boats Little Damaged in Crash.

ASTORIA, Ore., Nov. 28.—(AP)—The British motorship Pacific Reliance and the States Line steamer California returned to this port today for inspection following a collision near Desdemona Sands, at the mouth of the Columbia river.

Neither ship was badly damaged, but with one plate torn and six others started on the California, the vessel was ordered to turn back from the outbound trip southward. The Pacific Reliance looked in the stern, investigators said after it had been struck there by the California.

The motorship was anchored off Desdemona Sands and was en route to Portland.

GPA RADIATOR GLYCERINE

freed 950,000 motorists from ANTI-FREEZE worries last winter

How was he to know his anti-freeze had evaporated?
"I guess it's safe" has cost motorists thousands of dollars. With G. P. A. Radiator Glycerine you always know your car is freeze-proof—because glycerine won't evaporate.

950,000 Users—Leave your car anywhere in any weather. You can always count on G. P. A. Radiator Glycerine's protection.

It's SAFE because it won't evaporate

Nearly a million motorists protected their cars against freezing for the entire winter with one filling of G. P. A. Radiator Glycerine last year.

They never had to worry about evaporation. They didn't have to add more anti-freeze every few days to keep the solution up to strength. They had none of the worry, fuss, and bother that the average motorist pays as the price of winter safety for his car.

Glycerine does not evaporate. That's the secret of its positive permanent protection. It won't steam off on the warm days. Its protection is always there when the cold snaps threaten.

It is safe, too. It won't harm the car finish. It won't attack the cooling system. It meets all of the U. S. Bureau of Standards requirements of a perfect anti-freeze. And it has no odor.

Five Representatives Face Vigorous Contests to Keep Seats in National House

Three Election Committees Will Be Organized Next Week at Next Regular Session.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Five representatives face vigorous contests over their seats in the house despite the fact that they have been serving officially since the beginning of the special session.

They were seated following receipt by William Tyler Page, house clerk, of certificates of election from the state secretaries, but throughout the summer and fall attorneys have been working on the cases of both contestants and a contest has been now complete and in the hands of Mr. Page.

Three elections committees will be organized next week to hear the contests after the regular session convenes Monday. They will go into the records and probably will hold open hearings.

With the exception of Representative Ruth Bryan Owen, democrat, of the fourth Florida district, the contests deal with disputes over the election returns.

W. C. Lawson, republican candidate for the Florida seat, charges Mrs. Owen lost her citizenship when she married a British army officer. Mrs. Owen returned to the United States after her husband died and claims to have lived here a sufficient time to have regained her citizenship and thus be eligible for her seat.

Former Representative Harry M. Wurzbach, republican, has been persistent in his attack on the contest over the seat held by Representative Augustus McClosky, democrat, of the fourteenth Texas district. He has declined to relinquish his office in the house office building and is understood to have charged irregularities in Texas county, Texas, elections. McClosky is a former mayor of San Antonio, seat of Bexar county.

John Phillips Hill is attempting to unseat Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, democrat, of the third Maryland district.

Jacob L. Milligan, democrat, of the third Missouri district, is stoutly defending his claim to his seat against H. F. Lawrence.

Ralph E. Unikel, defeated republican of the seventh Indiana district, is contesting the seating of Louis Ludlow, democrat.

After the committees have completed their investigations into the cases they will draft reports to be submitted to the house for disposition. Then it will be decided whether the seating of the contestants shall keep them.

In a contest succeeds in unseating a contestant, both will receive salaries for service up to the time of final action, but if the contestant fails to prove his claims he will not receive any compensation other than the specified amount which the house, however, provides for defraying the cost of his contests.

NANTASKET BEACH SWEEP BY BLAZE; $1,000,000 DAMAGE

HULL, Mass., Nov. 28.—(United News.)—Nantasket Beach, summer amusement center north of here, was ravaged by fire tonight with damage estimated at more than $1,000,000.

Five steamboats, a railroad station, the state bathhouse and a pier and St. Anne's church were destroyed. The Church of the Assumption and the steamer Mayflower were damaged seriously.

Twelve firemen were injured, one of them, William Hatch, of the Hingham fire department, critically.

BANDITS BLAST SAFE AND ESCAPE WITH $20,000 LOOT

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Eight men invaded the Case & Martin Fire Company plant early today, bound eight employees, blasted the safe and escaped with currency and securities worth $20,000.

The robbers, armed with revolvers and a shotgun, rounded up the workers and herded them in the boiler-room, where all were bound with electric light cords, while the bandits cracked the safe with nitroglycerine. The employees were left on the floor, and it took them three hours to loose their bonds.

QUIET THANKSGIVING ENJOYED BY HOOVERS

Simple Dignity Features White House Observance of Holiday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The annual Thanksgiving for the blessings of the year was observed in quiet dignity throughout Washington today with worship and rest.

Along with many officials of the government, President Hoover carried out the spirit of his Thanksgiving Joy proclamation by attending holiday services and remaining in seclusion at home. Everywhere flags fluttered over the closed government buildings.

In keeping with Mr. Hoover's proclamation statement that "assurances of peace, at home and abroad, have been strengthened," the chief executive heard from the pulpit of the church he attended the plea that America lead the world into brotherly peace. The sermon was preached by Bishop William Fraser McDowell in the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist church at a union service of all churches of that denomination in Washington.

Without referring specifically to the forthcoming naval limitations conference in London, Bishop McDowell said the "supreme opportunity for American world leadership to peaceful pursuits is at hand."

"We may be grateful for this," the bishop said, "and if we are successful we may blow trumpets, sing praises and be thankful forever. The United States has the men and the money to make a new mind in the world in this school of Christ concerning peace. We can destroy the old mind of hate and fear."

The president attended the services with Mrs. Hoover and their son and daughter. With him also was Edgar Rickard, a former business associate and a close friend during his food administration days.

This evening the fine old table in the state dining room was spread for turkey, both wild and domesticated, and other good things, singing and a few intimate friends. Except for a short automobile ride, the president and Mrs. Hoover spent the day at the White House.

The recess of congress took many senators and representatives from Washington for the holiday. Some members of the cabinet also left the city. More than usual, the day passed with unostentatious since the government is in mourning for the late secretary, James W. Good.

Members of the diplomatic corps from Latin-American countries attended services at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church, where the traditional Pan-American mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, the apostolic delegate, and Archbishop Curley, of the Baltimore diocese. A special Thanksgiving festival was held at the Washington Cathedral under the direction of the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal bishop of Washington.

The chief recreation for Washington citizens was provided at Bowie race track, where the annual $10,000 Thanksgiving Day handicap attracted a large field.

CONFESSED SLAYER OF TWO TEXANS TO DIE IN CHAIR

BEAUMONT, Texas, Nov. 28.—(AP) Luther Berwick, confessed slayer of William Byrd, 21, and Miss Bell Crowe, 18, at Port Arthur, Texas, recently, today was under sentence of death.

Berwick testified at his trial, which resulted in conviction last night, that he shot Byrd while crazed with jealousy and that the girl was killed accidentally.

The shooting occurred in front of the girl's home.

play was found last night in front of his cabin on the outskirts of Deerfield. The man's clothing was torn and his skull crushed.

LEADERS OF BUSINESS TO MEET NEXT WEEK

Expansion Programs Will Be Discussed at Conference at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(United News.)—Business prepared today to take over the prosperity insurance task started by President Hoover.

Leaders of the great trade associations of the country, more than 100 organizations representing nearly every line of industrial productivity, will gather here a week from today to discuss their plans for expansion.

The meeting was called by Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce, at President Hoover's request, after the first meeting of industrialists at the White House, to outline expansion plans over the country, reducing the federal income taxes, particularly on corporations and the wage-earning citizens.

Organization Meeting. Barnes views the meeting as an organization meeting, and he expects a continuing body to be formed to carry on the work, partly through correlation of efforts and partly through co-operation with federal agencies, particularly the federal farm board, the interstate commerce commission and the federal reserve board.

Now that the president's activities have brought forth a prospective aggregate of $9,000,000,000 to be spent next year, the time has come, business leaders believe, to show their self-reliance.

Once upon a time, not so far back, the cry of business would have been for national legislation to save the situation. Now business proposes to organize its own campaign of expansion, "hoping thereby to destroy its psychological dependence on the stock market, and to insure full dinner pails and continued dividend checks."

President Hoover's speech to the new conference here Thursday is expected to turn the reins over, figuratively, to business. He probably will outline the government's part-increasing its public buildings program

Bells Will Ring Signal Opening 1929 Seal Sale

Thousands of church bells, school bells and fire bells are to ring in cities, towns and hamlets throughout the country at 10 o'clock this morning, to signal the opening of the national Christmas seal sale.

From Maine to California the seal, depicting a mother and child, will come to life in concerted bell ringing by persons garbed to represent the figure on the Christmas seal.

In New York city the celebration will be led by Mayor James J. Walker, who is to ring the bell in the old city hall. At this signal more than a thousand chiming will peal out the Christmas seal message to New Yorkers.

In old North Church, Boston, where Paul Revere's lights were hung in 1775, the bells will "ring the knell of tuberculosis." The people of Plymouth, Mass., are to hear the clangor of the church bell on the spot where the Pilgrims built their first house of worship; arrangements have been made for ringing all the fire bells in Fall River, Mass.

The campaign waged in this, the twenty-second annual Christmas seal sale, is to be conducted by 1,400 state and local tuberculosis associations, and in addition 15,000 special committees covering every crossroad and hamlet with an army of workers estimated to be more than 500,000. The sale is sponsored throughout the country by the National Tuberculosis Association.

Cuban Consul Enthusiastic Over Local Preparations To Greet Good-Will Party

Dr. Oscar Morales Leaves for Miami To Confer With Members of Tourist Commission.

Interpreters Are Needed For Visit of Cubans

Habia Usted Espanol? If you do, or know of someone who does, please communicate at once, through the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, with the committee in charge of arrangements for the Cuban Good-Will Tour to Atlanta. In order to make the Cuban visitors feel as much at home as possible, the committee wants every available Cuban or resident of other Spanish-speaking country, now in Atlanta, and every Atlanta citizen who speaks Spanish, to send in name, address and telephone number IMMEDIATELY. The general committee will greatly appreciate this co-operation. Telephone Walnut 0845.

Dr. Oscar R. Morales, Cuban consul to Atlanta, left Thursday noon for Miami, in company with Senora Morales, where he will meet officials of the Cuban national tourist commission for the purpose of conferring with them relative to the forthcoming Cuban good-will tour to Atlanta. They will return to Atlanta Monday.

On the eve of his departure, the consul expressed his deep gratification in behalf of his countrymen over the hospitable spirit and high enthusiasm manifested by the Atlanta people toward the good-will delegation. He was warm in his praise of the efforts being made by the various committees under direction of Colonel J. C. Woodward, general chairman, and Colonel Fred J. Paxson, vice chairman and chairman of the finance committee for the tour.

Dr. Morales has been in almost constant communication with the foreign office in Havana and stated that the Cuban government was highly enthusiastic over the tour and regarded it as an outstanding mission of international good-will that will go far toward cementing the social, trade and political relations between Cuba and the state of Georgia.

Hallman Organizing Parade.

Henderson Hallman, grand marshal for the parade, was busy Thanksgiving Day organizing a corps of deputy marshals who will work closely with him in directing the elaborate spectacle which will feature arrival of the Cubans in Atlanta. Bands, military organizations, veterans of the Spanish-American War, civic clubs, cadets from G. M. A. in full dress, and high officials of the state, city and federal government will greet the big Cuban party when they leave their train at the terminal station. The 40 honor cadets selected by the president of Cuba from the student body of the national military academy will exchange formalities with the massed units of the Georgia Military academy on the plaza in front of the station.

Following the welcome, the parade will form and proceed across the Spring street viaduct, where the Latin visitors will be given their first view of Atlanta's skyline. As they enter Marietta street they will be greeted by a great sign in Spanish reading, "Bienvenidos a Atlanta." or to translate it literally, "In Atlanta, You Are In Your Own Home!" which is a common form of courteous greeting extended to a guest who crosses the threshold of one's home.

Gay bunting and crossed American and Cuban flags will greet them along the entire line of march, presenting the aspect of a carnival or "fiesta," as the Cubans love to call such occasions. Virgil Sheppard, well known Atlanta decorator, is chairman of the committee in charge of this phase of arrangements.

The march will proceed east along Marietta street to Grand square, where the paraders will turn north into Forsyth street. At Peachtree they will move north to Baker, flank to the left into Spring and disband at the Capital City Club.

G. M. A. Sets Practicing. Under the able leadership of Captain M. C. Padgett, head coach of the academy's 1929 varsity football squad, and his capable assistants, C. J. Burbage and C. M. McQuarry, the cadets are getting into fine trim for the clash with the terrors of the Cuban Athletic Club.

The Cubans are a fine bunch of fighting material, judging from all accounts. The College Park boys are not going to have an easy battle. While the Spanish lads are perhaps heavier and older, the sharper climate and unfamiliar soil of Atlanta will weigh against them and help to equalize the chances for the cadets.

Altogether it will be one of the hardest fought prep games in the history of Georgia football, and this, together with the fact that it is an international contest, is certain to attract a large crowd. Added to this interest is the fact that the game, which will be played on December 6, will be Georgia's first night football, outside of a few practice scrimmages.

Heavy Advance Ticket Sale.

A special committee, headed by Milton Dargan, Jr., and assisted by Maynard B. Smith, G. M. A. alumnus, and J. H. Lambert, membership secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, is directing advance sale of tickets. G. M. A. cadets in full dress uniform, have been ordered out by Colonel Woodward to canvass the downtown section of Atlanta in pairs to give every member of the business world, from high executive to office boy, an opportunity to get tickets to the night game and by so doing give their support to the entertainment program for the visiting Cubans.

For the convenience of those who cannot be reached within the short time before the game, blocks of tickets have been placed on sale at several places in the central district. They may be purchased at Cable Piano Company, Trammell Scott's Sporting Goods store, Tumlin Brothers cigar stand in the Hurt building, Stuart Murray's, in the Candler building, Jacon's pharmacy at Five Points, Davison-Paxon's, Rich's and the Chamber of Commerce.

The entire proceeds from the sale of tickets will be used by the finance committee, headed by Colonel F. J. Paxson, president and treasurer of Davison-Paxon's, to provide a lavish entertainment for the Cuban visitors in keeping with their rank and Atlanta's reputation for hospitality. Co-opera-

NEGRO GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE FOR KILLING COP

SOMERSET, Ky., Nov. 28.—(AP)—The jury which tried Ivan Hunter, negro, for the killing of Patrolman McKinley Massingale in a liquor raid on November 1 today returned a verdict of "life imprisonment without pardon."

Addition of the words "without pardon" to the verdict was an unusual action on the part of a Kentucky jury, such verdict not being provided for in law. There was considerable speculation as to what effect it might have.

The verdict was returned after two hours and 15 minutes' deliberation. The patrolman was shot through a door after a liquor raid. The negro's attorneys based their plea for clemency on his apparent subnormal intelligence.

FLORIDA MAN KILLS WIFE, SERIOUSLY WOUNDS RELATIVES

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Nov. 28.—(AP)—B. Bennett tonight made good a part of his threat to kill his wife and members of her family.

He shot Mrs. Bennett, 39, with a double-barreled shotgun, killing her, and administered possibly fatal wounds to Herman Stafford and his wife, Mrs. Bennett's daughter, in what is believed to have been an effort to wipe out the family.

Bennett was taken by sheriff's deputies a short time after the shooting when people living near the Bennett home telephoned for help.

tion of several of Atlanta's civic clubs has been pledged in disposing of large blocks of tickets among their membership. Among these are the American Legion, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta Foreign Trade Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

Disraeli, '100 Per Cent Man,' Was Henpecked Husband

BY HELEN AND OLIVE PARISH. Disraeli's wife cut his hair, trimmed his fingernails, dressed him, and selected his clothes.

"Disraeli's wife cut his hair, trimmed his fingernails, dressed him, and selected his clothes," according to Mrs. Charles Myers, 80-year-old Atlantan, who belonged to Lord Beaconsfield's generation, and whose recollections of Disraeli, English statesman, are very vivid.

"My father," said Mrs. Myers, "was of pure English descent and, although his family had lived in America for several generations, he was always keenly interested in matters of British politics. We all believed he was more or less feared because of his marvelous power and his immense influence with the queen."

Everybody followed his actions, continually expecting him to make a false move. Yet he was one of the few men who never made a mistake."

Mrs. Myers retains a clear personal portrait of Disraeli, a medium-sized, thin, stoop-shouldered man, who wore his hair in shoulder-length ringlets, and whose velvet vest was apt to be streaked with suet.

Mary Anne, Lady Beaconsfield, was an ideal wife in Mrs. Myers' opinion. She was far from intellectual, but was always a comfort and a relaxation to her harassed husband, with her amusing chatter. Since she was twelve years older than her spouse, she always made a great effort to appear young, and to follow the demerits of fashion. In this she was remarkably successful. In later life, however, she called forth criticism from the court because she wore very girlish wigs, and dressed stylishly in red and white, her husband's favorite colors. Her stylistic judgment was impeccable, nevertheless, and she personally selected, ordered, and purchased every item of her foppish consort's personal attire.

Mrs. Myers' recollections of Britain's political giant are well corroborated in the film, "Disraeli," which is to be shown at the Metropolitan theater next week. All his life "Dizzy" was both dreaming and actually living a romance. Daily he presented his wife with the matutinal offering of a single flower, which he himself picked in the garden. His features, perpetually smiling the impression of a wry but smiling grimace, accord very well with the impression Mrs. Myers has sketched of a crafty, powerful, dominating, but intensely human statesman.

FLORIDA AVIATORS STILL ALOFT IN TRY TO SET FLIGHT MARK

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Tampa's endurance plane, the Sealsweet of Florida, which went up this morning at 7:16:20 o'clock, was still soaring over the city tonight, its tank holding enough gasoline to keep it aloft until morning.

The plane made a contact with its refueling ship late this afternoon and at the same time Pilots Leonard Carothers and Tom Livermore took in their Thanksgiving dinners from a bag at the end of a rope lowered to them from the refueling ship. They dropped a message saying, "Motor is O. K."

The fliers hope to stay aloft long enough to set a new world's refueling record.

SCHNEER OFFICIALS VISIT ATLANTA STORE

President and Secretary of Jewelry Firm Plan for Coming Season.

William Schneer, president of Schneer's, Inc., and J. G. Fisher, secretary and treasurer of the company, are in Atlanta to confer with Irving Kanter, manager of the Atlanta store, on plans for the coming season.

The company operates a number of jewelry stores throughout the south, the one in Atlanta having been recently opened, and Mr. Schneer expressed satisfaction at the large volume of business the local branch had reached in so short a time.

Mr. Schneer and Mr. Fisher brought with them a large stock of the newest merchandise from headquarters, located at Norfolk, Va., and one of the principal things they had under consideration was an advertising campaign to place these values before the public.

Mr. Kanter announces that the force of employees has been augmented for the Christmas season and that the store is prepared to meet all demands for service.

GETS 12 MONTHS FOR ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO KILL

COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 28.—(AP)—J. W. Howard, 68, was sentenced yesterday to serve 12 months at the state farm on a charge of assault with intent to murder Mrs. Eleanor Walker, who he said he thought "needed killing."

He fired a shot at Mrs. Walker several months ago. He pleaded guilty in September, but sentence was deferred at that time.

DIES IN AUGUSTA HOSPITAL AFTER DRINKING POISON

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 28.—(AP)—W. D. Matlock, 25, of Thomson, Ga., died in a hospital here early today, a few hours after he told friends that he had drunk poison.

Matlock entered the living room of a boarding house here, where he made his home, and told acquaintances that he was soon to die. Then he reeled and fell. He was taken to a hospital. Coroner R. E. Elliott said he had not determined whether an inquest would be necessary. Acquaintances said Matlock apparently had been in a cheerful mood and could assign no motive for his act.

Two brothers, L. R. Matlock, of Thomson, and J. T. Matlock, Panama Canal Zone; two sisters, Mrs. R. S. Hadaway and Miss Nita Matlock, of Thomson, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. McCorkle, of Thomson, are among those surviving.

Senator Warren Laid to Rest As Guns Pay Nation's Tribute Through Wyoming Blizzard

Dean of Senate, Pioneer and Soldier, Buried as Country's Leaders Gather To Honor His Memory.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 28.—(P) The body of Wyoming's "Grand Old Man," Francis E. Warren, veteran of the United States senate, came home for the last time today and was borne to his final resting place in Lakewood cemetery.

The series, notes of "taps" and a major general's salute of 13 guns concluded the martial pomp reserved for the nation's greatest.

Snow and leaden sky emphasized the mournful atmosphere as the flag-draped casket on an artillery caisson moved to the place of interment to the dirge of a military funeral march.

To those who regretted the inclement weather, Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, a member of the congressional committee which accompanied the body to Cheyenne, said:

"No, it is characteristic of the storms he breathed all his life."

Met at the railroad station this morning when the special funeral train reached Cheyenne, the senator's body was received by a military escort of honor from Fort D. A. Russell.

Slowly the procession moved to the state capital building.

Body Rests in State.

In the cathedral dimness of the rotunda of the capitol building where the rugged veteran of the pioneering days of the west had served twice as territorial governor, and again as first governor of the state of Wyoming, the body lay in state for two hours while multitudes—distinguished men and women, friends and admirers, passed by the bier, many of them tear-faced.

The funeral escort, consisting of the entire garrison of the military post, received the body at noon and began the march to the place of interment.

The procession was headed by the massed bands of the First and Twentieth regiments, followed by Brigadier General C. R. Howland, commanding officer of the post.

Then in the line of march came the troops of Fort Russell, the clergy and the casket and pallbearers, who were selected enlisted men from the post.

Members of the congressional delegation from Washington, who served as honorary pallbearers, followed.

Next in the procession were the mourners—the widow, Fred E. Warren, the son; General John J. Pershing, a son-in-law, and close friends.

Made History.

The presence of General Pershing recalled what a panorama of history the eyes of Senator Warren beheld.

Born in 1844, he took a heroic part in the nation's Civil War; saw the United States become a world power through the defeat of Spain, and was chairman of the senate finance committee while his son-in-law, General Pershing, led the American troops to victory in the World War.

Next in the long procession was Governor Frank C. Emerson, of Wyoming; justices of the supreme court, other state officials, city and county officials, veterans of the Civil, Spanish and World Wars, representatives of civic and fraternal organizations and at the rear innumerable private citizens from every part of Wyoming.

While the body was being enfolded forever in the bosom of the state Senator Warren loved so well and to which he gave such high service for a half-century, 13 guns were fired at one-minute intervals by artillery at Fort Russell—the formal major general's salute.

After the casket had been lowered three salvos boomed the salute to the soldier dead, followed by another 13-gun salute. Then "taps" sounded Wyoming's final tribute.

Today also was the first anniversary of opening of the glass-enclosed pool, and the exercises included a water football game and other contests, in which the New York executive awarded prizes.

Governor Roosevelt was the principal speaker at the Thanksgiving dinner. He outlined the growth of Warm Springs since its inception as a health resort a few years ago. At the first Founders' Day celebration, he recalled, 43 persons were present, but tonight over 200 shared the Thanksgiving dinner and heard his Founder's Day address. The exercises referred to the patients as "his happy family."

Edward J. Flynn, secretary of state of New York, who arrived shortly before the dinner was served, also spoke. He asserted he long had wished to visit Warm Springs and Georgia, and was delighted with the purpose and beauty of the resort.

Other speakers were Arthur E. Carpenter, business manager of the springs, and G. Fred Botts, of Warm Springs. The patients and guests were entertained after dinner by special performers from Atlanta.

FORTUNE TELLER WHO HYPNOTIZES VICTIMS SOUGHT

The hunt for a gypsy girl who casts spells upon fortune-telling clients and then robs them, was renewed with vigor by police here Friday following new developments on Thursday.

The woman first leaped into the notice of the police department when she approached Mrs. Anna Bullock, of 253 Woodward avenue, one day last week and after offering to tell her fortune, cast her under a hypnotic spell, it is said, and robbed her of $10.

Returning a few days later, $35 was taken from Mrs. Bullock, police were told.

Several such cases have been reported, according to detectives, and though an effort was made to find the gypsy, it was not expected that anything would be uncovered by the investigation. However, on Wednesday afternoon the same gypsy reappeared and is said to have worked her tactics upon Mrs. W. T. Underwood, of Chattahoochee avenue, N. W., vanishing with $35.

This renewed interest in the case and police have redoubled their efforts to find the fortune teller.

One of a series of ads by Atlanta school children for Davison-Paxon's toy department.

Don't drag Junior and Little Sister onto the elevator when you take them to town to see Santa Claus and all the Christmas toys. The elevator will scare their stomachs and they'll get in the way of people's legs. Mother will go back home so tired she is wishing Christmas never happened.

Just go to Davison-Paxon's and walk into the front entrance and down one flight of steps and you're in the Toy Department! It isn't any worry and trouble at all, just a lot of fun. And all the new toys are there—Cuddly Baby, the Golden Arrow racer, magic sets, the Mystery Gun that shoots down airplanes, the cutest little ski jumper and everything children love for Christmas.

Nine Widows of Veterans Last Survivor of War with Mexico Passes Of War of 1812 Pensioners

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—A little group of nine gray-haired women, whose husbands fought under the American flag 114 years ago when it had only 15 stars in its folds, are drawing a total of $450 a month, or $50 each from the American government.

The annual report of the pension bureau records these widows of veterans of the War of 1812, and at the same time announces that the last veteran of the war with Mexico died in September this year. He was Owen Thomas Edgar, and served in the Civil War widows, a decrease of 16,692.

The number of Spanish War soldiers was 178,804, an increase of 14,000 for the year.

In addition to mailing pension checks to 477,915 veterans and relatives of veterans, the bureau disbursed $10,072,472.42 from the civil service retirement and disability fund.

Since the establishment of the pension bureau, Colonel Earl D. Church, new chief of the service, said a total of approximately 7,000,000 pension certificates have been issued of all classes under which nearly $8,000,000,000 has been disbursed. In addition to this huge amount paid out to veterans of wars, land grants to soldiers serving prior to 1855 totaled 69,000,000 acres of public domain.

Colonel Church views the records of the pension bureau as priceless descriptions of lives fought with heroism, devotion, privation and death. Here, he said, in interesting detail, can be found a portrayal of the lives of patriots and their associates—their lineage, aspiration and achievements. Other persons to the number of 3,024 realized the importance of the papers from a historical viewpoint and called during the year at the bureau to make inquiries.

There's plenty of real pepsin in Dare's Menthia Pepsin—there's Menthia and other stomach correctives, and it is sold by druggists in every city and town in America with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't do your distressed stomach more good than anything you ever tried, money back. Improvement in conditions of highways between this city and Augusta, Thomasville and Jacksonville was reported Thursday by the Atlanta Motor Club.

According to the motor club bulletin, the Augusta highway, route No. 12, is "rapidly drying out and motorists will experience no difficulty on this road. ENRICHING THE STATE.
Under the caption "Atlanta Scores Again" the editor of the Chattanooga Times notes the closing of the contract for the improvement of the Union depot property of the state's Western and Atlantic railroad in this city with a splendid and costly office and cold storage building.

That question is one of much importance both to Georgia and the city of Chattanooga. It would seem wise and highly business-like for the Western and Atlantic railroad commission to take up consideration of the suggestion and prepare with timely prudence to ask the next general assembly for authority to negotiate for the fullest possible improvement of the state's valuable property in Chattanooga, but the Times newspaper correctly says that most of the buildings now on it are "a disgrace to Chattanooga."

In favor of the democrats which reaches close to 100,000. It will be recalled that last year Roosevelt for governor got a small majority while AJ Smith for president lost the state by a large majority. This latest vote for assemblymen indicates that the Roosevelt vote persists and has been largely augmented. If it holds over into next year it may mean a large gain of democratic congressmen from New York state, a result much to be desired.

WHO KILLED COCK TARIFF?

The chairman of the democratic national executive committee, J. H. Shouse, charges the failure of the special session to enact a tariff bill as resting "on the doorstep of the president and nowhere else." That is branding the Indian sign on President Hoover with hot vigor. But the weight of comment upon the tariff shuttle-cocking, from both democratic and republican presses, is not with Chairman Shouse.

Those comments take on two tempers—one of amusement and one of pity. The democrats generally express a humorous sympathy with the president because, as a green politician, he was misled by seasoned old campaign barrel-tumblers into promising the call for the special session. Borah and Brookhart and McKelvie, as advisors, made Hoover, the candidate, believe that the western hayburners were "agin him" and that the way to win them into line was to promise them something big and luscious. Hence the pledge to have a special session to put agriculture on a plumb "parity" with the hi-jacking protected industries of the nation. The innocent tyro fell for that talk and went on the snipe-hunt.

That President Hoover believed it was a square-deal proposition is beyond question. The message he sent to the special session is clear proof of that faith. He asked for farm relief, for agricultural-industrial parity, and for no tampering with the non-agricultural tariff rates further than to bolster any actually suffering industries. That is good democratic doctrine of the Cleveland sort as set out in the winning platform of 1884. And when Hoover restated it practically in his special session message the democratic press applauded it.

There is no reason to believe that Hoover has changed his views about what the special session should have done—and didn't. He did his constitutional duty of "informing them of the state of the Union" and then refrained from injecting the executive into the legislative department. If, then, Chairman Shouse will shift his gun just a little and shoot his shot into the radical republican protectionists who built the Hawley-Smoot bill, he will get the game he is hunting. They are the fellows who double-crossed their own president and set out to loot the whole people to pay their campaign debts to the protected plutocrats of industry.

Every one who doesn't belong to the Joe Grundy crowd must feel pity for a president who was hoodooed by his trusted party managers and then led to the lions of loot by a great partisan majority that could have made him the toast of the nation instead of the roasted.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW
By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

A Sergeant's Dilemma
Sergeant Wikus of the United States marine corps finds himself in embarrassing situations, according to a report to the Paris Times. Sergeant Wikus has been in charge of the marine guard in the island of Gonaive near Haiti. This verdant tropical spot is ruled by a "queen," plump, cheery and black as the ace of spades. Impressed by the white man's superiority as exemplified by Sergeant Wikus she made him "king" with the title of "Faustine II." Life moved along smoothly in the tropical paradise until one day a yacht arrived in port there. On it was a wealthy woman whose pulchritude was surpassed only by her whiteness. Once again the sergeant's fatal attraction was at work, and friendship bloomed. The yacht left and so did the sergeant, on a two months' leave of absence. Now Wikus is on his way back to duty on board the yacht with his second conquest and the problem is serious. He cannot have two "queens" at once on his tiny island. Will he abdicate and take up the white man's burden in his own country? There's sure to be a row.

Titanic As A Talkie
The new wave of naturalism which is overwhelming the literary and the theatrical world in Germany, reports the Observer, is responsible for the only adverse criticisms leveled at the new talking film, "Atlantic." This is the ambitious first production of British International Pictures, important to Berlin because of the persistent struggle being carried on against the American "talkie" invasion. "Atlantic," which is a dramatization of Ernest Raymond's "The Berg," and as close a copy of the Titanic disaster as the cinema can make, is likely to bear without public protest, has doubled the talking parts with German actors and actresses with so much success that the "Atlantic" for German audiences becomes an entirely German talkie. The only complaints made are directed toward preoccupation with the affairs of the first-class passengers. Accustomed to Russian pictures, Berliners want to know how the imminent fear of death affected the crew. There must have been wild scenes in the engine room long before the men were permitted to dress themselves and join those waiting for death on the upper deck. The picture has a fine production value, but the possibilities of the sea for sound films filled with terror, less talking and more drama.

Was Poe In France?
Frenchmen have always been intensely interested in the mysterious personality and tragic fate of Edgar Allan Poe. The recent anniversary of his death was the occasion of a number of articles in the Paris newspapers, one of which, published in L'Intermédiaire, was of a sensational nature in so far as the author quoted a letter from Alexander Dumas, the celebrated French novelist, in which he described a visit from Poe in France. Now, it had been regarded as pretty well established today that Poe not only never was in France, but he never met the famous and mysterious trip to Europe in which some of his early biographers believed. Into the midst of a long-standing certainty the Dumas letter now falls like a bombshell. Is the letter genuine? And if so, wasn't Dumas merely indulging in one of his little mystifications, of which there are other examples in his works and correspondence? Or is it not possible that he himself was duped by some Parisian farceur? All these questions French experts are now asking themselves. Most of them are frankly skeptical. M. Leon Lemonnier, for instance, who is the author of several important works on Poe, remarks that the chief objection against the Dumas letter is the fact that Dumas nowhere else makes any mention of Poe's visit, and never spoke of it to anyone, even when the American poet's name was brought up in the course of conversation. More Truth Than Poetry in Constitution's Page Advice

Sermons To Live By
By ELAM FRANKLIN DEMPSEY.
Text: "Which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?" Luke 14:28.

Here we have before us the sound-minded practical man. He may not be a man of genius or of brilliant gifts, nor may he be of special personal personality, but he is the kind of man that everybody finally comes to lean upon.

May God multiply the number of dependable men! So many are making a failure of their lives because they have not, in the beginning thereof, counted the cost of the career upon which they have set forth.

Edgar Guest, who has said so many sensible things in pleasing verse, bids us "Count the Cost" in the following impressive stanzas:

"Count the cost before you buy,
Count the cost before you do,
This will save you many a sigh,
This will keep your record true.

"Pleasure wears a smiling face,
Cheap her trinkets seem to be,
But who follows her in chase
Will return to misery.

"Life is long and sticky shame,
Clings to garments bright and fair;
Long that mark you'll have to wear.

"Count the cost of every smile,
Count the cost in pain and tears,
Joy that lasts a little while
May bring the shame which lasts for years."

If you discover that you have taken the wrong road, it would be foolish to continue in it; turn to the right and go straight ahead!

If He Cleans the Great Man's Shoes
He Has Some Share in Greatness

By Robert Quillen
A man may be down, but he isn't whipped until he is shamed. Beat him and starve him and break him, and yet he will lift his bloody head and mutter through set teeth: "It takes a man to stand punishment like that."

Poor and jobless, an outcast in tatters, he still will look about for some peg on which to hang a shred of self-respect—and having found it will also find grace to lift his head and keep trying. In any extremity he will find something of which to be proud. Why? Why does the meanness of men overlook his shortcomings and fix his attention on some fancied excellence? Because self-respect is the breath of life to his nostrils. Because he must respect himself if he would live. Because, when self-respect is gone, he hides from men and at last makes an end of life in an effort to hide from himself.

Knowing his vital need of self-respect, Nature blinds him to his faults and gives him something of which he can be proud—if only his humility, or the toughness of his beard. Pride protects him—as spurs and claws and teeth protect other creatures that have other enemies.

At different stages of his life he is proud of his muscle, his mental agility, his social successes, his family, his wealth, his achievements. Whatever the cause may be, the result is a self-respect that enables him to look the world in the face. The world's workers, poor and unknown, respect themselves as kings if a bridge is built or a tunnel dug, the dirtiest mucker on the job feels the same decent pride in accomplishment that lifts the chin of the chief engineer.

And this satisfaction in doing something useful and worth while—this consciousness of being necessary to the world's welfare—gives to the worker an independent and unquestioning self-respect capable of enduring shocks that would break the pride of those who lean on wealth or birth. The dignity of usefulness is known, as though by instinct, to the most ignorant of men. Instinctively they busy themselves at some useful or helpful task when some extremity of misfortune threatens their reason.

To be useful and helpful is to salvage self-respect, and when self-respect is saved the man is saved. This is the way of salvation for those who are cowed by shame. The bum who lifts another bum from the gutter has begun his climb back to manhood.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON
BY MOLLIE MERRICK
Special Dispatch to The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.
Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 28.—Time was when a picture was written by one person and directed by another. Today one may have stage direction, camera direction and dialogue direction. There is the original plan or story, the scenario done by still another person versed in movie tactics, and the dialogue generally written by an author. Pictures are generally written in by specialists. The work of the modern talkie requires a full sheet of credit items and a full staff of experienced writers. Frank Reicher has been doing some of the most interesting dialogue direction in recent months. He comes to the work with a vast experience from the legitimate stage.

Old established movie men still welcome their colleagues of the theater, whereas in the first days of the talkie they were cat-and-mouse. One of the Hollywood lots has recently named its street after the core of the theatrical and shopping district of New York. Park avenue, Broadway and Fifth avenue from 35th to 50th street, was the area chosen. Street signs have been erected. It brings William W. Barons' office to the corner of Broadway and Fifty-second street.

As this lot fosters one of the largest percentages of eastern talent the streets were undoubtedly named with an idea of making the easterners feel at home. John Barrymore and Rin-Tin-Tin are said to use their doubles more than any other stars in pictures. The most interesting double in the village has long been Geraldine Dvorak, duplicate of the intriguing Greta. Externally Dvorak is really far prettier than the girl who plays her. She lives in a barn and is an artist of talent, it is told.

Evidently some quaint person had a horse in this town once, before everyone had money enough to buy imported cars. A handsome girl named Edith, who was credited with the role of a girl brought a Greenwich Village touch. Her taffy-colored hair was parted in the center and coiled low on the neck. Lapis-lazuli eyes laughed out of a bronze face with prominent eyebrows. She lives in a barn and is an artist of talent, it is told.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS
BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.
Flushing, L. I.
I was brought up a Baptist—but I have left it behind long ago, largely because of a wider range of reading, and also because temperamentally I could not digest it. Yet thousands never read nor hear anything that will make them pause and think, and they are horrified at any doubt cast on fundamentalism. However, I have no quarrel with them or their beliefs. To me the individual's relation to his God is a sacred and purely personal matter. I have little respect for the sort of mentality that can harbor primitive ideas on God, heaven and hell.

May it not be to some extent because of what I have criticized that men and women of the underworld have refused to believe in religion at all, with the consequence that their acts are based on their lack of belief in anything higher, finer or nobler? You may say that I have defeated my own contention; that the police service of the conscience is needed during formative years, and that it is only when the adult has been molded by that service that he may safely disregard it. I wonder whether hell fire and eternal damnation have ever proved efficacious as a deterrent and whether the other side of the picture is alluring enough to draw men to it. Won't you express your views about this?

Permit me to hint that though you have left some earlier thoughts behind you still carry the old prejudice against our surpassing Baptists like John Bunyan, Roger Williams, Adoniram Judson and Cornelius Woolfink. Surely you have known the great American history sufficiently to recognize these names and what they stand for in Christian culture, civic righteousness, sacrificial labor and literary power.

Fundamentalism also has its notable figures. Charles Haddon Spurgeon was listed on that theological side, and with important modifications so was Alexander MacLaren, of Manchester. When you or I grow to the knees of these giants we shall see that they were not so far from the common lot of primeval man. But intelligent believers have long since outgrown that stage. Primitive ideas about God, heaven and hell were the common lot of primeval man. But intelligent believers have long since outgrown that stage. Primitive ideas about God, heaven and hell were the common lot of primeval man.

Frankly, I detect in your letter that accent of common sense which would lead you to the conclusion that the suggestion that conscience can be dispensed with after "formative years,"

THE REFRIGERATOR SCARE.
New York, the skyscraper city, has 188 buildings of more than 20 stories. Chicago has 66. If Chicago hasn't more skyscrapers than New York, at any rate Hickville on the Hudson has nothing on the Windy City when it comes to tall stories.

Many readers, alarmed by reports of poisoning by gas escaping from mechanical refrigerators in the Chicago district are inquiring about the relative safety or danger involved in the use of various makes of refrigeration apparatus. In my opinion there is no choice among all the makes that are now or have been on the market in that respect.

The publicity given the accidents in the Chicago area may be ascribed to eagerness for publicity on the part of certain of the manufacturers who were associated with the accidents. Now, with all the evidence that could be brought to support the scare, I can assure the public that there is no more danger involved in installing and using domestic mechanical refrigerators than there is in keeping a car in the family garage; indeed, the keeper of a car is much more likely to be per thousand families than the use of a mechanical refrigerator in the home.

All of the cases or alleged cases of poisoning from methyl chloride reported from Chicago and elsewhere occurred in buildings equipped with multiple systems, in which it was necessary to maintain high pressure in order to keep the apparatus working efficiently. This high pressure, of course, caused a gas leak every possible point of escape, and wherever a small leak occurs the pressure forces a large volume of the gas out into the atmosphere in a short time. If the refrigerator is an ammonia type, sulphur dioxide, the strangling odor at once warns occupants of the leak. But methyl chloride has no pronounced odor, or at least not one as pleasant and hence a considerable concentration might be present in the air before any one on the premises would suspect a leak.

If this happens in a large building equipped with the high pressure multiple apparatus, it is a serious matter. But no one need have any anxiety about this in a private residence where only one or two refrigerators are maintained. A dozen of the 30 or more mechanical refrigerators on the market employ methyl chloride as the refrigerant. Nine or ten employ sulphur dioxide gas, and the rest use ammonia. The latter is the most dangerous of the three, but it is not so dangerous as the public has been led to believe. I have observed methyl chloride refrigerators giving out a strong odor for years.

Considering the millions of homes where mechanical refrigeration is in use and the other millions where it is not installed eventually, it is only fair to assume that the danger is no good reason for discriminating in the choice of such equipment on the ground of healthfulness or safety.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Soliman Is Not Solomon.
Having read your statements about the possibility of the skin absorbing anything I looked up some authorities. I find in Soliman's Manual of Pharmacology, 10th edition, p. 1039: "Absorption of mercury occurs mainly from the hair follicles, into which it is forced by rubbing and then it is gradually converted into soluble compounds."

C. H. McK. M. D.
Answer.—With all due respect for Dr. Soliman as a teacher, I assure you that the skin does not absorb anything. The skin is a barrier to the outside world. It is not a sponge. It is not a filter. It is not a screen. It is a barrier. It is a barrier. It is a barrier.

Another Pronouncement.
One of your correspondents asked whether a blood test will show whether the patient has diabetes or not. My reply was: No, a blood test will only show the presence of sugar in the blood, but that doesn't necessarily signify diabetes; and excess of sugar may be found in the blood in many other conditions than diabetes. I showed this to my physician, who says a test showing excess blood sugar means diabetes, even though no sugar be found in the urine; further, that excess blood sugar is found in only one other condition, than diabetes, namely brain tumor. I report this for your information.

A. V. D.
Answer.—Nevertheless an excess of blood sugar is not rarely found in cases of pancreatic disease not associated with diabetes, and in cases of chronic alcoholism. Clinicians today recognize functional overcretion of insulin which tends to diminish the blood sugar content, and insufficient insulin secretion which may explain excessive blood sugar apart from all other causes. My reply to the correspondent's question was right in the line of the facts concerned with the interpretation of such tests; your physician's pronouncement is right so far as your health interest is concerned.

The World and All
By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL.
Francis M. Martyn, Evansville, Ind., writes in defense of fathers. There was some discussion in this column about the importance of fathers in the lives of many persons. I believe the talk arose out of a letter which suggested that fathers are not so important as they once were, and that a young man does not know his father as he once did. Mr. Martyn goes to the Bible for ammunition where to support the father's position. He points out that Christ "taught us to pray to Our Father." That "He always called His Father." That, on one occasion, He even "spoke rather rudely to His mother." That "The Old Testament says, 'Like as a father pities His children.'" And, lastly, Mr. Martyn says that a young man does something remarkable, we naturally ask, "Who is his father?"

I would hesitate to agree with the statement that Jesus spoke rather rudely to His mother. To be sure, the words sound rude, as they are translated for us into English, but translation is a very imperfect operation. The boy addressed his mother as "Woman," according to the trans-

Startling Depletion
Of U. S. War Supplies

CONGRESS APPROVES
MEXICAN PRESIDENT
Assistant Secretary Explains Importance of "Educational Orders" for War-Time Needs of Army.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(United Press.)—The United States war supplies have decreased rapidly in the last 10 years, and a large number of necessary items could not be obtained during the first few months of any future warfare under present conditions, Assistant Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley said today in his annual report.

Hurley, acting secretary since Secretary Goddard died, recommended that congress authorize small "educational" orders for munitions, to be placed with industrial plants to enable them to equip themselves for possible emergencies. Peace-time munitions are made in government arsenals.

When Hurley and his officers and civilian assistants talk of war they refer to "M Day." This might be 100 years off, but regardless of its place in the calendar, it is the day when the army begins to mobilize when purchasing agents begin looking around for shoes, uniforms, rifles, mess kits and what not by the millions. Hurley's job is to create a coordination between private manufacturers and the army so that the factories will be equipped on "M day" to begin mass production of needed equipment. His report quotes his predecessor, Colonel C. C. Robbins, as follows:

"There has been no one subject in the war department that has been under greater fire than that of educational orders, and practically all will confess that the munitions trusts of getting away with a large percentage of appropriations for national defense, I have not been here very long, but I have run up against them in congress. They do not seem to understand the value of national defense or what we call educational orders."

Major General Edgar Jadwin, former chief of army engineers, explained in the report the practical effect of failure to place educational orders which would enable the army to maintain necessary manufacturing equipment.

"So far as the crops of engineers is concerned," he said, "about 85 per cent of its items are of a general nature, manufacturing nature and commercial in character. Industry can easily turn to the manufacture of most of the non-commercial items, but the 15 per cent of the items which are of a general nature, manufacturing nature and commercial in character, cannot be manufactured under present prospects at anywhere near the rate of replacement under the general mobilization plan."

"We will require 500 on 'M day.' We are securing them at the rate of 12 per year. At the rate of 70 at the sixth month of the war, but only 20 will be produced. We need 3,800 by the twelfth month and only 450 complete light tanks will be available."

Hurley's final word was: "A large number of items essential to successful military operations cannot be obtained during the early months of warfare either from commercial stocks or by production. The past 10 years has witnessed a rapid decrease in the stocks accumulated at the time of the armistice, and this decrease still continues due to deterioration and budgetary limitations."

CAPT. L. G. DALZELL, VETERAN MARINER, DIES AT SAVANNAH
SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 28.—(U.P.)—Captain Lincoln G. Dalzell, a veteran master mariner of the Ocean Steamship Company, died here today after an illness lasting two years. His last command, until retirement two years ago because of a heart ailment, was the steamship City of Atlanta. He was with the Savannah line for 25 years.

Four or five years ago he commanded the Atlanta when a rescue of the crew of a foundering steamer, the Hatteras was made, Captain Dalzell keeping the wheel of the schooner in his home as souvenir. He is survived by his widow, one but the 60-year-old son. His funeral will be held here Saturday.

NEW ORLEANS BOY IS UNDER ARREST IN BANK HOLDUP
NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 28.—(U.P.)—Nate Vaccaro, 18, driver of an automobile which police halted after firing seven shots in a midnight chase, today was held as a suspect in an investigation of the $15,000 robbery yesterday of the Algiers branch of the Canal Bank and Trust Company. The companions of Vaccaro's escaped as the machine stopped.

Three men, heavily armed, held up the bank, with a policeman on guard stepped into a nearby room, where they fled in a car operated by a fourth member of the gang.

DOUBLE BILL OPENS MACON'S OPERA SEASON
MACON, Ga., Nov. 28.—(U.P.)—A double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," was presented here tonight at the opening of the grand opera season instead of Aida, as had been advertised.

The switching of the bills was necessary, it was announced, because of the illness of Amelia Bruni, who was to have played the part of the slave-girl princess, Aida.

"Balletto" will be given tomorrow and Aida, Hurley said. The season will close with "Lucia di Lammermoor" on Saturday night.

The performances are being given by the Pennsylvania Grand Opera Company. A large crowd attended tonight's performance, special trains bringing students from Bessemer College at Forsyth and from Wesleyan college.

Paper Manufacturers Arrange Compromise, Abating Price War
MONTREAL, Quebec, Nov. 28.—(U.P.)—What threatened to be a pulp and paper price war between the International Paper Company and the other Canadian interests has been averted.

Mauretania Little Damaged In Collision With Car Float, Inspection at Pier Shows

Big Steamer Is Quickly
Reconditioned—Passengers Little Excited by Midnight Crash.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP)—A survey at the pier today disclosed that the liner Mauretania was only slightly damaged as the result of a collision with a railway car float in the harbor near the Statue of Liberty late last night.

The giant liner, outward bound, proceeded on to quarantine shortly after the accident and remained anchored until daylight. She then steamed to pier under her own power. A force of about 50 men was put to work immediately repairing the damage to her port bow above the water line.

The workmen were engaged at their task for eight hours. First they cut away the damaged plates with acetylene torches and made a template for a new piece, which was made up at a New York shipyard.

The new section was filled with cement. There remained only a comparatively short delay for the cement to set and the liner was ready to sail. Cunard line officials said there had been only one cancellation of passage after the liner put back to her pier. Ship's officers said the shock of the collision, which occurred about midnight, was not particularly severe and many of the passengers who had retired did not know an accident had occurred until they awoke today.

Captain S. G. McNeil, master of the liner, said he was proceeding slowly down the harbor on an ebb tide when he sighted a double railway float owned by the Pennsylvania railroad. He said he gave one sharp blast, indicating he was steering to port, but the captain of the tug pulling the float did not respond to his signal. Then, Captain McNeil said, the tug gave two blasts, indicating it was continuing on its course across the path of the liner.

The master of the Mauretania said it was too late then to do anything about the car float "except save him as much as I could." He said the liner struck the float about 10 feet from its stern, and the impact apparently broke the hawser from the float to the tug, as the tug drifted off with the other float.

Passengers who were up in the public rooms felt the ship tremble at the impact and went to the promenade deck to see what had happened. They heard shouts of officers giving directions, but there was no excitement.

CIVIC FEDERATION TO DISCUSS WIDER WHITEHALL PLAN

Interest of the southwestern division of Greater Atlanta is centered in the mass meeting at Lee Street school auditorium tonight, called by the South Fulton Civic Federation for considering widening and repaving Whitehall street from Gordon street to Trinity avenue. Dr. W. Beecher DuVal, president of the federation, will preside.

Twenty-eight community civic clubs, together with the municipalities of College Park, East Point and Hapeville, representing the territory throwing traffic into Whitehall street, will protest present traffic conditions and limited access to the downtown sections, while Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, City Attorney James L. Mayson, Chief of Construction Clark Donaldson, the entire personnel of Fulton county commission and ward representatives in city council, will be on hand to present their respective sides.

KU KLUX LINKED WITH PEN MUTINY

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Disclosure of the trial of the organized Ku Klux Klan group within the walls of the Colorado penitentiary, with both guard and convict members, presented a new angle today in the investigation of the mutiny at the penitentiary October 3 in which 13 lives were lost.

The revelation was made by Thomas J. Tynan, for 16 years warden of the prison, in testimony before Governor William H. Adams' special commission investigating the riot. He testified that plotting of the Klan against the prison administration had caused a collapse of discipline.

Lack of proper discipline, traceable to this organization, was responsible for the outbreak of last month, during which a handful of convicts barricaded in a cellhouse held the entire law enforcement machinery of the state at bay for more than 18 hours, the former warden asserted.

Tynan charged that a former governor negotiated with Klan officials in an effort to oust Tynan as warden. He timed that attempt during the administration of Governor William E. Sweet. In his testimony, however, he did not mention Sweet's name.

"In order to get me in bad," Tynan told the commission, "he (the governor) met secretly with the Klan. As a result of these conferences, charges were preferred against me."

Tynan testified that the late Rev. Fred C. Arnold, one time head of the Klan in Colorado, organized the branch of the order in the penitentiary. He further charged the organization of the Klan inside the penitentiary was a political maneuver and had a lasting effect in the administration of affairs.

After making his charges of Klan machinations, Tynan urged the commission to recommend changes in the administration of the penitentiary. He suggested a cement factory or some other similar enterprise be established within the prison walls to employ convict labor. He testified that highway construction offers one of the best labor activities for prisoners.

Tynan blamed the state legislature for not providing larger quarters and making general improvements and declared overcrowding one of the worst evils of the present situation at the prison.

BOY'S CHARRED BONES EVIDENCE IN MURDER

State Will Establish Corpus Delecti With Fragments.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ark., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Human bones picked out of a heap of ashes which officials claim was the funeral pyre of Connie Franklin, alleged to have been murdered and burned alive in the St. James community, near here, last March were disclosed today by Sheriff Sam Johnson as the principal evidence in the trial next month of the five men accused of the murder.

The bones, now in Sheriff Johnson's possession, are expected to be "Exhibit A" in the murder trial. Their discovery by the sheriff some time ago gave him the first important lead in his investigation of the case, which Franklin, a mentally deficient youth and virtual stranger in the St. James community, had been slain to prevent his marriage to 19-year-old Tiller Rumber, a native of that section.

Only a few bones of the head were found, the other in the opinion of the sheriff, having been thrown into a small creek nearby. The bones have been identified by state health department authorities and several physicians as those of a human, according to the sheriff.

Without these, officials say it would be difficult to establish the fact Franklin is dead, a necessary bit of evidence in a murder trial.

The first report that spread through the community after Franklin's disappearance was that he had left that section. It was not until some months later when Ross Younger, a prisoner charged with night riding, was reported to have sent word to friends in the St. James community that he would "tell about Franklin's murder."

Johnson formed the definite opinion Franklin had been slain. Younger, incidentally, was sawed out of jail the day after he was reported to have sent out the warning. He has not been found since, although officials are searching for him in the hope that if found he could be made to reveal new information.

With this clue Sheriff Johnson began searching the St. James hill country for evidence, and one day came upon the bones in a pile of ashes. He has guarded them closely since.

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Nov. 28.—(Special).—The death of J. D. Garrison, former minister of the Christian church, whose body was found Tuesday near his home here, was due to heart failure, a coroner's jury decided here today.

Mr. Garrison first was reported missing from his home Monday and was found dead in a field near the residence early Tuesday.

He is survived by his widow, four sons, Cecil Garrison, William Garrison and Warren Garrison, of Carrollton, Ga., and C. C. Garrison, of Manchester, and two daughters, Mrs. Luther Pitts and Mrs. Bertha Evans, of Carrollton.

Paris Mannequin Positions Most Beautiful Women Are Found In Ranks Stepping Stones to Marriage

BY PRINCESS ALI FAZIL,
United News Staff Correspondent.
PARIS, Nov. 28.—(United News). It takes more than a pretty face and fine lines to become a mannequin in the dressing rooms of the Rue de La Paix.

The ranks of Paris mannequins have been filled with ambitious American girls, titled Englishwomen, Russian and other emigre princesses and the pick of the most beautiful Frenchwomen. They all have an indescribable something which makes a dress, ugly by itself, look attractive and worth the handful of $100 notes asked.

There are 10 applicants for every mannequin job, and not the least reason is that the position is a better stepping stone to marriage than the musical comedy chorus.

Jean Patou returned from one of his American tours with 12 beautiful American mannequins. Not one of the dozen is showing dresses today. Some married millionaires, others titled nobles.

Patou's idea was that nothing pleased American buyers so much as to see American girls wear the models in the American way. His method was copied widely, and some salons even have Spanish mannequins appearing before South American buyers.

Some pretty applicants try to pretend they have been mannequins before, but when the couturier says "mademoiselle, lie down," the girls are really there.

Obesity has been the horror of these girls, who sometimes weigh several times daily in fear of putting on an extra pound. But the new fashion will ask the mannequins to eat cakes for lines are rounded and hips are really there.

TENNESSEE ASSEMBLY TO GATHER MONDAY

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 28.—(AP)—The Tennessee legislature will meet in extraordinary session Monday to consider Governor Henry H. Horton's financial program designed to wipe out the state's indebtedness of nearly $4,000,000 and to make possible repeal of the 20-cent land tax.

In his call issued last night, the governor recommended the imposition of taxes on motor lubricating oil, admissions to amusements and on cosmetics, an increase in the cigarette tax, extension of the excise tax and the tightening up of several existing laws to yield the full amount of revenue they provide. He pointed out that none of the taxes proposed were on business or land.

Governor Horton estimated that his financial program would produce $3,500,000 of additional revenue annually, sufficient to wipe out the existing deficit within a year, with approximately enough available thereafter to counteract the loss of revenue through lifting of the land tax.

Approximately $1,000,000 more annually would be returned from the increased cigarette tax alone, Governor Horton estimated. He recommended that the tax be raised from 2 to 4 cents on a package of 20. No other change in the tobacco tax was suggested.

A proposed tax of 5 cents a quart on lubricating oil would go towards the highway department indebtedness and under the program of applying an additional cent of the present gasoline tax to this indebtedness after 1935, all existing highway indebtedness and all created by this legislature would be retired by 1943, it was estimated. The amount of the proposed cost-

New girls sit on stools and study competent mannequins as they walk. Some of the veterans step along with royal condescension. Others enter smiling, their arms a little away from their bodies, and then, as they walk across the salons, move their arms in cadence. Others have just a twist of the body to and fro.

Mannequins on duty line together in dressing rooms full of cupboards and mirrors. 20 or 30 women of different but striking beauty. They discuss each other's hair, complexion, etc. If a new one has the luck to sell the dress she wears 10 or 20 times over in a season, then, jealously reigns.

Each mannequin has a stool with a small table filled with a variety of paints to enhance beauty.

The girls arrive at 10 a. m., disrobe and don silk slips. They model dresses many times a day. They work until 7 p. m., and then make a month's salary of $20 to $30, the lower figure being for the inexperienced ones who have not mastered the art of walking.

Obesity has been the horror of these girls, who sometimes weigh several times daily in fear of putting on an extra pound. But the new fashion will ask the mannequins to eat cakes for lines are rounded and hips are really there.

Under the program, part of the gasoline tax would go for emergency landing fields and to match government grants for construction of airports. Creation also of a division of aviation in the highway department was suggested.

The state funding board recommended that the state funding board be given authority to borrow up to $10,000,000 for building highways and bridges, and also to renew notes maturing next year.

A state highway patrol would be created and provision made also for establishment of a state game propagation farm and hatcheries. In addition, the governor's call provided that the 1929 appropriations might be opened to consider revision, amendment or repeal.

FRANCE NOT ALARMED BY GERMAN NAVY GUNS

PARIS, France, Nov. 28.—(AP)—France has no fear of modern German cruisers carrying 11-inch guns, such as the new 10,000-ton Ersatz Preussen.

Minister of Marine Georges Leygues made this clear today when he was "called on the carpet" by the naval committee of the chamber of deputies. He insisted that there was no need for amending the French cruiser-building program.

Several members of the committee had previously preached the wisdom of making new plans for eight-inch gun cruisers authorized by the Washington naval conference, because Germany, which is not affected by the decisions of the Washington conference, was constructing cruisers that are really equal to modern battleships in armor and gunpower.

Although he was careful to avoid giving many technical details, M. Leygues intimated that France's projected 10,000-ton cruisers were not as weak in armor as some people thought. He said they could "take care of themselves."

Questioned about the French attitude at the London conference in January, the minister of marine avoided assuming any responsibility, and advised the committee to ask for a statement from Premier Tardieu and Foreign Minister Briand.

A sub-committee was appointed to submit a list of questions to the premier and the foreign minister about the French naval policy to be followed in London, and the two statements later appear before the committee to explain it.

The members of the committee were united in the opinion that France should have a navy strong enough to defend the French coasts on three seas and the African and the more distant colonial possessions.

The navy budget introduced today calls for the expenditure of 2,583,000,000 francs (approximately $100,000,000). This is less than the 1914 naval budget by 572,000,000 francs (approximately $22,800,000). The report of the naval committee's secretary calls attention to the smallness of the French naval budget compared with the British and American budgets for 1929.

The liberal amendment, which was considered in committee of the whole, would have made unemployment benefits applicable to persons under 18 years of age provisionally at their attendance at courses of instruction. Margaret Bondfield, minister of labor, opposed this as being unfair, while the machinery for giving such courses was lacking.

The labor party benches cheered loudly when the result of the vote was announced. One of the laborites shouted: "The new coalition won't work."

BRITISH LABOR PARTY IS NEARLY DEFEATED

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The fact that many members were absent saved the labor party from defeat tonight when liberals and conservatives voted together for the first time on a liberal amendment to the unemployment insurance bill.

The government forces had a margin of 70 votes but observers agreed that if the absentees from the opposition parties had been in their seats, the cabinet would have been defeated. A defeat on the amendment, however, would not have meant resignation of the government. Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister, has announced on several occasions that he would not send in the resignations of the cabinet unless defeat came on a major measure.

The liberal amendment, which was considered in committee of the whole, would have made unemployment benefits applicable to persons under 18 years of age provisionally at their attendance at courses of instruction. Margaret Bondfield, minister of labor, opposed this as being unfair, while the machinery for giving such courses was lacking.

WEALTHY CHICAGOAN SLAYS WIFE AND SELF

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—(AP)—James C. Pauley, 56, reputed millionaire coal operator, and his wife, Mrs. Effie Loraine Pauley, 50, were found shot to death in a room in the Ambassador hotel here tonight.

Police said indications were Pauley had killed his wife and then ended his own life. Pauley was chairman of the board of the Miami Coal Company, which operates mines in the vicinity of Terre Haute, Ind.

Pauley was a heavy loser in recent stock market declines, and, in addition, had been despondent because of ill health.

The bodies were found by a bell boy, who was sent to the apartment by Pauley's chauffeur. The latter had driven his employer to the hotel and been instructed to wait. After a half hour, he sent the bell boy to inquire when Pauley would be ready.

The boy received no response and called the manager, who opened the door and found the bodies. Mrs. Pauley's body, fully clothed, was in the living room, slumped in a chair, a magazine which she apparently had been reading lying at her feet. Pauley's body was found in the bathroom. Each had been shot once through the head.

Coroner Herman Bundesen, after a preliminary examination, expressed the murder and suicide theory. He said indications were Pauley opened fire on the woman without warning.

She apparently had been interrupted while entering notions in an engagement book found near-by. Numerous check stubs and receipts for securities sales were found in the room. Two pieces of Mrs. Pauley's dress, one of Mrs. Pauley's shoes, Mrs. C. Tilton, of 605 Avenue N. Varre, Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Arthur Varre, Miami, Fla., were notified.

The Pauleys had been married 23 years.

SALVATION ARMY CAPTAIN MARRIES ATLANTAN'S SISTER

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Captain Emma Turkington, director of young people's activities here for the Salvation Army, tonight became the bride of Captain Kenneth A. Swarth, member of the staff of the army training school at Atlanta.

The ceremony was performed in the city by Commissioner Samuel L. Brengle, of New York, and witnessed by several hundred. Brigadier Alfred Tyler, commander of the Kentucky Tennessee division, was master of ceremonies.

Cadet Anetta Turkington, of Atlanta, was her sister's bridesmaid. The couple left for Detroit on a honeymoon trip before going to Atlanta where the bride is to become a member of the training school staff.

ROBBERS WALKS PAST POLICEMEN TO MAKE GETAWAY

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Forcing open the doors of his cell and walking quickly through a crowd of policemen in police headquarters, James Trinkle, 15-year-old safe robber, made a successful escape Tuesday night. He was recaptured today.

He tore off a side bar of his steel cot and employed it as a lever to pry open the doors of his cell in the detention home where he had been confined since his arrest on a charge of being implicated in a series of safe robberies in this city. He stepped into the corridor and went through police headquarters and then out into the night without being observed.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa G. Candler, Jr., left Wednesday in their Lockheed Vega plane for Nashville to spend Thanksgiving with their two daughters at Ward Belmont school. They will make a tour of the east before returning. Beeler Blevins is piloting the ship.

Late Thursday, H. F. Stevens, assistant manager of the Hotel New Yorker, and Lieutenant E. Q. B. Henriques, aviation manager of the hotel, left upon the last leg of a 15,000-mile air tour to advertise the hotel when they took off for Savannah to attend the meeting of the Hotel Men's Association which opens there today.

The pair left New York in September and have toured the Pacific coast in addition to the northern part of the country. They arrived here on Wednesday in a Curtis Robin "Challenger."

Williamsburg, Va., Returns To Forgotten Cavalier Glory

Rockefeller Restoration Transforming Sleepy Village

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 28.—(United News).—Williamsburg, the 17th and 18th century capital of the Old Dominion, at last is emerging from a centuries-long sleep in grass and weeds—not to modernize itself, but to don anew the curled wigs and buckled shoes of its forgotten cavalier glory.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s millions have bought the town in virtual entirety, and slowly are transforming it into the nation's first indigenous museum—for unlike Henry Ford's Dearborn museum, all its exhibits will be those of its own old-time life.

With expenditure averaging $6,000,000 a year, a fact which was learned recently, it is expected that work will be completed in five years at an approximate cost of $30,000,000.

Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, heading the work for Rockefeller, bought up 86 per cent of the property before the inhabitants learned Rockefeller was the moving spirit. Now prices are skyrocketing. One house, purchased by a newcomer for $100 two years ago, is selling for $20,000.

Some owners have found a gold mine in Rockefeller's undertaking. Forty old houses have to be restored. As many more must be replaced. Seventy-five modern buildings and residences will be razed or moved away. One historic dwelling is being moved in 60 miles from the country so it can be fitted into the architectural scheme.

There is something to be done to almost every building. Only the insane asylum—the first built in America by the colonial governor of George III—is untouched. Escapes from it are frequent, but it fits the period, so will not be harmed.

An idea of the cost of the patriotic project is given in the announcement that the new high school, which cost $40,000, is to be razed and rebuilt elsewhere at a cost of $80,000 in order to make room for a $500,000 replica of the old capital.

Paved streets will be ripped up and laid out with topsoil as of old. There will be no more electric lights. The old heating methods will be used. Bricks are being specially manufactured by an ancient process from local clay by the colonial governor of George III—untouched. Escapes from it are frequent, but it fits the period, so will not be harmed.

Rockefeller first tried to buy up worn brick, but found them too red, dish, and then installed his own kiln. Tourists are flocking to the town "Irish Joan of Arc."

Irish Woman Leader Freed On Sedition Charge

DUBLIN, Ireland, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Maurel, Gonne MacBride, noted Irish republican leader, was acquitted today on a charge of sedition growing out of a speech which she made recently regarding the government's justice protection bill.

Mrs. MacBride went on trial in the central criminal court this afternoon. She has long played a prominent part in the Irish republican movement and for many years has been known as the "Irish Joan of Arc."

THE GUMPS—THE PRIDE OF THE BALL

Housebroken
BY PAUL HERVEY FOX

SYNOPSIS.
Tom Davies, football star of a small eastern college, plays brilliantly in his last game. After the last Bruce Stevens, his roommate, asks him to go to the dance that night to escort a girl who'd been asked down to the college for him. Bruce explains that he wishes to avoid meeting one of the chaperons. Tom agrees to substitute for him. The girl, Suzanne Branch, makes an instantaneous appeal to him. She tells Tom that she is engaged to marry a friend of her father's. After she leaves, Tom writes to her. Bruce the Christmas holidays Tom meets Suzanne in New York. Suzanne breaks her engagement to the other man when she and Tom realize they love each other, and Suzanne invites Tom to her home to meet her family. Suzanne goes down to the college for commencement.

After graduation Tom's father gives him a small house at Stamford as a wedding present.
Suzanne and Tom are married in November and for the first few months are perfectly happy. One day Tom stays in town to have dinner with the family. When he returns Suzanne upbraids him. The alarm blows over, and a few weeks later he promises to attend a prize fight with some of the boys. Suzanne creates such a scene that Tom gives up the idea. It is the winter of 1928 when Tom returns to Stamford. He is delighted to see him. He asks Bruce to occupy the guest room at his house. Suzanne and Tom quarrel over Bruce's visit. When Bruce tells Tom he is going to stay at the hotel, Tom asks him as a special favor to stay on at Stamford. Then Suzanne becomes cordial to Bruce and later starts a flirtation with him. Bruce realizes that it is all pretense and is done to get rid of him and his influence. Making Tom jealous. Bruce confides this to Tom and offers to help him, and together they arrange a plan.
Tom comes home one evening to find Suzanne in Tom's room. She storms around the house, and then Bruce tells him that he and Suzanne love each other and he is going to take her away with him to his camp in Maine. Tom agrees to let her go, and Suzanne is willing to leave with him. She calls up her friend, Kathleen Mohr, and asks her to go to Maine with them. She agrees, and the three drive up in Tom's old car. They arrive at the hotel on the island and find it in a deplorable condition. Kathleen tries to make Suzanne comfortable.

INSTALLMENT XXIII.
PRETENSE.
Suzanne was grateful to Kathleen. "I'll never be able to thank you enough. It was wonderful of you to come along. I don't know what I'd have done without you," she said to Kathleen.

There were circles under Suzanne's eyes, and the wind had twisted and knitted her hair. She did not seem to care how she looked. She went inside the room and shut the door.

When Bruce returned Kathleen put her finger to her lips. "She's lying down. We must be very, very quiet. Poor thing—it's been a terrible shock to her. Now while I get some of these things straightened out, you'd better cut some wood."

When he had filled the woodbox and laid a fire in the hearth in preparation for the evening, she suggested that he go for water. The spring was a quarter of a mile away, and the only path was so ridiculously small that he had to make six trips.

He was really working, a thing which he did as little as possible in life. But that seemed to be the price exacted for being near this tall, handsome girl.

Late in the afternoon Suzanne rose, changed her clothes and strolled down to the shore. Bruce, with a glow that came from healthy exhaustion, found a comfortable chair. Even his cigarette tasted sweeter to him. He noticed that Kathleen was looking at him inquiringly.

"Aren't you going to join her?" she asked.

He shook his head. "I'm going to sit right here and smoke and talk to you."

"What do you mean?"
"I might as well tell you," he said, "that she asked me to leave her alone as much as possible."

"She asked you?"
"She isn't in love with me, you know."

Kathleen gave a sound of protest. "But you said you were in love with her?"

"Yes."
"Then aren't you going to try to make her care for you? And how can you be so stupid as to believe her?"

"What do you mean?"
"She's left her home for you, hasn't she? She probably only said that to test you! O, you're heartless! You've got to go to her right now. You don't have to talk—she'll feel that you care for her."

Her big eyes were so serious. Many unfamiliar emotions struggled in Bruce. He wanted to tell her the whole truth, but how could he? It would sound like a pretty despicable thing to this girl. On the other hand, if he refused to go she would certainly suspect.

He threw a longing look around the room which she had somehow made so cozy, at the first which he had just lighted. He chuckled a cigarette away and threw on his coat.

Kathleen watched him through the window as he made his way down to the shore and toward the figure standing there, gazing out to sea. There was a peculiar smile on Kathleen's lips.

The next two days had for Bruce something of the timelessness of a dream.

They were endless, and yet they flashed by. He felt a curious peace in place of the restlessness that was forever driving him to new scenes of plunging him into new scrapes. But now the island, its rocks and water, the pines and the sky above them, seemed to make the world complete. Kathleen had frankly taken on her own shoulders the task of running the little household. Though Suzanne did come out of her lethargy and do her share of the work, she moved as if an abstraction, and seemed only too glad to leave all initiative to the other girl.

Bruce had thought of Suzanne before as high-spirited; but now she smiled seldom, talked little, and seemed only to be waiting for the days to go. He had not credited her with so much fortitude, for he saw plainly enough that Tom never left her thoughts. Once or twice he felt that this was a cruel thing he had done; yet he reasoned things out to his own satisfaction. After all, she had been just as unfair to Tom, and this was not punishment but correction. He could count on Tom to sit tight, he felt sure, and in the end Suzanne would be worn out even with waiting. He had managed to get off one brief word to Tom by Captain Jones, a penciled message which the captain promised to wire:
"Everything fine; slow but sure; hang on."

But Suzanne was not often in Bruce's thoughts, or Tom, either, for that matter, in the succession of peaceful and beautiful hours. Kathleen's presence on the island somehow made it charming to him; he had no wish to leave.

Only one thing did he dislike: Kathleen's determination to throw him and Suzanne together at every opportunity. He would no sooner settle himself before the fire with her, or throw a fishline off the ledge into the swirling water, while she watched with absorbed eyes, than she would recollect Suzanne and demand that he go and comfort her at once.

He had tried to protest, but he did not dare to do so too much. He had to keep up some sort of pretense, and reflected that he was getting along with the least possible show of ardor.

As for his comforting Suzanne, this was in the letter only. When he found her he would wait as patiently as he could, often in silence, until he judged he could with propriety go back to Kathleen again.

He saw nothing particularly humorous or strange in his position. For the first time in his life he did not analyze himself and his environment, but took things as they came.

The weather had held magnificent. As for his comforting Suzanne, this was in the letter only. When he found her he would wait as patiently as he could, often in silence, until he judged he could with propriety go back to Kathleen again.

The third morning the wind blew briskly and the water poured over the lower ledges on the shore. Captain Jones did not even put in an appearance, and as the day advanced Bruce could understand why.

He had wandered out after lunch, and, crossing to the northern shore, he saw Kathleen, her arm around a sapling, standing there looking out across the whitewashed water.

She met his eyes and nodded. "It's great, isn't it?" she said. Her cheeks were warm with color and her eyes sparkled. "Look at that water out there! This is just like being on a ship!"

He stood close to her. The wind had risen now so that they had to lift their voices to be heard. The sky had been growing dark. Black clouds came charging across that expanse of sky.

DEBUTANTES AND VISITORS TO BE ENTERTAINED TODAY

Miss Sarah Law Makes Debut at Driving Club

Foremost among the interesting parties planned today for debutantes and visitors, is the formal reception and dance at which Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cassells Law will present their debutante daughter, Miss Sarah Law, to Atlanta's exclusive social contingent at the Piedmont Driving Club. Sharing honors with the lovely debutante will be a group of guests who are spending the Thanksgiving holidays with her: Misses Carol Christenberry and Cynthia Mahan, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Miss Daisy Kemp, of Miami, Fla.; Miss Margaret Withers, of Columbia, S. C., and Miss Virginia Walthour, of Savannah. Miss Mahan and Miss Christenberry were schoolmates of Miss Law at National Park Seminary, in Washington, D. C. Three other members of the Debutante Club, Misses Catherine Norcross, Adeline Winston and Katharine Howell, will be honored at a luncheon given by Miss Palmer Dallis and Mrs. Bun Wylie will be hostess at a seated tea at the Atlanta Woman's Club in compliment to Mrs. Dudley Golding, of Wichita Falls, Texas. Miss Frances McKenzie, who is spending the Thanksgiving holidays at home, and her guest, Miss Edith Menzies, of Detroit, Mich., will be prettily complimented with a luncheon given by Mrs. William J. Davis at her home on West Peachtree street.

Miss Susan Hansell Weds Lt. Vance, U.S.A.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 28. The marriage of Miss Susan Wharton Hansell and Reginald Franklin Conroy Vance, lieutenant air corps, United States army, was solemnized Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at St. Paul's Episcopal church, in Chattanooga, Tenn. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., rector of the church, assisted by Colonel Julian E. Yates, chaplain sixth cavalry, performed the ceremony. The church was decorated with palms, ferns and greenery, white chrysanthemums and candelabra holding white tapers, and Brian Owen, organist, rendered a program of music. The bridesmaids were Misses Jean McNear, of San Francisco, Mary Hansell and Jean Nutting, Atlanta, and Mrs. C. H. Reed. They were gown in pale gold taffeta and wore close-fitting gold caps and carried Pernet roses. Mrs. John Lawrence Ryan, Jr., matron of honor, wore a Carmel tea-rose taffeta, with gold cap and carried Talisman roses. Miss Mary Vance, of Kentucky, maid of honor, wore a similar costume. Lieutenant Hayward S. Hansell, air corps, the bride's brother, was best man, and groomsmen were Lieutenant W. P. Coleman, air corps; Lieutenant W. F. Jennings, Lieutenant W. H. Hunter, Lieutenant A. M. Miller, Lieutenant C. H. Reed, Lieutenant J. L. Ryan, Jr., of Sixth cavalry. The lovely bride entered with her father, Colonel Hansell, by whom she was given in marriage, and her handsome wedding gown of rare Italian lace was fashioned with long skirt, and graceful court train, worn over ivory crepe. Her tulle veil cascaded from a pearl-trimmed cap and she carried an arm bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies. A brilliant reception followed at the officers' hall at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and the bride cut the wedding cake with the bridegroom's saber, following the cavalry tradition. Miss Vickers Weds Mr. Romines At Presbyterian Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Thomasine Vickers and Charles Clifford Romines was impressively solemnized yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in the West End Presbyterian church. Rev. E. L. Flanagan, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony before an assemblage of friends and relatives. The altar was banked with palms forming an effective background for the ceremony. Pedestal baskets of gold chrysanthemums, interspersed between the palms, were seven-branched cathedral candles and the pews reserved for the family were designated by streamers of white tulle. A program of music was rendered before the ceremony by Miss Helen Schaid, pianist, and Mrs. William Modena, soprano, who sang "The Day of Golden Promises" and "All For You." The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was used as processional and Mendelssohn's wedding march as the recessional. "To a Wild Rose" was rendered by Miss Schaid.

Bridal Party.
The ushers were Benjamin Rhett, brother-in-law of the bride, and David Price, Miss Margaret Killian acted as bridesmaid, and wore a model of king's blue flat crepe fashioned along princess lines. She carried a long, narrow, cream-colored chrysanthemum tied with pale yellow ribbon.

Miss Mildred Ford, maid of honor, was crowned in Harding blue flat crepe made with light bodice and graceful skirt with uneven hemline and carried yellow chrysanthemums tied with yellow satin ribbon. Walter R. Thomas and Jack Branch were groomsmen. The matron of honor, Mrs. Benjamin Rhett, sister of the bride, wore Prussian blue fashioned with a long waistline and flowing skirt. She carried gold chrysanthemums tied with gold satin ribbon.

The bride entered with her father, Shelton Vickers, by whom she was given in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, O. J. Parker.

Lovely Bride.
The bride's loveliness of the bride was enhanced by her gown of navy flat crepe fashioned with bodice waist and long circular skirt falling in an uneven hemline. The long tight sleeves with bows tied over the elbow were a feature of the model. She wore deep blue soiled hat. Glazed ostrich drooped from one side and two rhinestone buckles were in the back. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses, showered with valley lilies tied with streamers of white satin ribbon and clusters of valley lilies.

Mrs. Shelton Vickers, mother of the bride, wore Peaky blue satin and corsage of opelia roses and valley lilies. Mr. and Mrs. Romines left after the ceremony for a motor trip to points of interest in Florida and will be at home upon their return at 547 Peoples street, in West End.

Well-Known Families.
Mr. and Mrs. Romines have resided in Atlanta since their childhood and the bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Vickers. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Katie Steele Vickers, of Sevier, Ala. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. DeMarcus Roland Vickers, pioneer citizens of Selma, Ala., and the great-granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Aurelius Pharr, of Washington, Ga. Mr. Romines is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Romines, of this city. He is a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology and a member of the Sigma Chi and Alpha Kappa Psi fraternities. He is associated with the Retail Credit Company of Atlanta.

This is because skin impurities are acid. Doctors treat acid inside the body with milk of magnesia. And now, dermatologists are getting amazing results in banishing complexion faults with creamed magnesia. All you do is anoint your skin with it, massage and rinse with water. It's as simple as washing your face.

It reduces enlarged pores to the finest, smoothest texture. Being astringent, it drives away the tell-tale signs of age. It rejuvenates the skin so quickly that any woman can look lovely tonight, years younger. And because it is so mild, it certainly is a blessing for fine, sensitive skins that soap so easily irritates and coarsens. It removes make-up and extracts impurities deep-set in the pores better than soap or cold cream. It changes dull, sallow skin to radiant clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons. Test

Creamed Magnesia clears the skin in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. It on those clogged, nose pores that stand out so boldly. Let it whiten your neck. It will also keep your hands soft and white. To get genuine creamed magnesia, ask your druggist for Denton's Facial Magnesia. Remember, five minutes works wonders. So, get your magnesia today and look lovely tonight.

GUARANTEE

It's impossible for Denton's Facial Magnesia not to improve your complexion. But, should it fail to delight you, even after the very first application, your dealer is requested to refund your money at once without question.

THANKSGIVING DINNER-DANCE DRAWS DEBUTANTES

Miss Julia Peebles And John R. Land Marry in Atlanta

John R. Land, a son of Judge W. A. Land, of New Orleans, associate justice of the Louisiana supreme court, and Miss Julia Peebles, of Charleston, S. C., were married Thursday morning at All Saints Episcopal church.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. W. W. Menninger, rector of the church, at 10 o'clock. Only immediate members of the two families were present.

The bridal party, which included Mrs. T. E. Lunsford, of Charleston, the mother of the bride; Mrs. W. A. Land, of New Orleans, mother of the groom; and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Boiz, of Grand Rapids, Mich., his brother and sister, were guests at a succession of parties Wednesday night and Thursday.

Wednesday night Mr. Land entertained a party of 12 at dinner at the Biltmore. Thursday morning the bridal party were guests at a breakfast at the home of Mrs. Olive Milligan, on Thirteenth street, and Thursday night they were dinner guests of Mrs. Ben Elias, at her home in Druid Hills.

The young couple will leave today for a motor trip through North Carolina, returning to Columbia, S. C., where they will make their home. Mr. Land has recently moved to Columbia from Louisiana. Mrs. W. A. Land left Thursday night for New Orleans, and the other members of the party will leave today.

Mrs. Cox Honors Grove Park Faculty.

Mrs. Lena Harris Cox honored the faculty of Grove Park school at luncheon last Wednesday at her home on Crescent avenue. Yellow and orange chrysanthemums were used for the festive decorations. Her guests included Mesdames Margaret Brown, Freeman Groover, Kate W. Horne, Carl J. Dadds, Hugh B. Martin, M. A. Pinkston, M. K. Word, Misses Frieda Embury, Frances Scott, Edith Phillips, Anna Baird, Anne Austin, Miriam Riley, Eunice Sue Hendrick, Louise Merritt and Zola Marshall.

Newlyweds Recipients Of Impromptu Honors

By Mme. Pompon.

THE debutantes were out in almost full force last evening attending the Thanksgiving dinner-dance at the Biltmore hotel, Miss Littel Funkhouser among others. She was just home from officiating as first bridesmaid at the wedding of Henry J. Stoutz and Miss Harvey Fancher, in Chattanooga, which had been quietly celebrated at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents. She motored back to Atlanta in company with the newly wedded couple, who were making the first lap of their wedding journey in this direction, whence they headed northward to Detroit and other cities. Miss Funkhouser entertained them at dinner at the aforesaid Biltmore Thanksgiving celebration. Only a very few present were onto the secret that Miss Funkhouser's guests were so absolutely newly-wed as to not as yet have even rubbed the mists of tulle and orange blossoms out of their eyes. When at the height of affairs the orchestra began playing the wedding march from Lohengrin the dancers were stricken dumb with amazement.

Just in which direction to look, hardly any of them knew. There was, however, a certain informative rush to a corner table. The rush was followed by throwing, scattering, spraying, even deluging of rice over a certain couple seated there. All of this left even the dullest-minded observer only one possible conclusion which was, of course, the correct one.

So much rice made the floor gritty, or was it slippery, but nothing stopped the enthusiasm so ingeniously excited. Although the wedding ceremony of the young couple had been an exceedingly quiet one, they must have felt that their wedding dinner was, in all respects, the exact opposite.

A CERTAIN early-to-be bride and groom (see Sunday announcement) were seated in cosy congeniality at another table, and the recipients of oft-repeated and deeply interested glances. The first idea of many was that the demonstration was in their behalf. They received a modest sprinkling of rice also, as a sort of initiatory warning of what was to be expected somewhat later. All in all, few present will ever take part in so jolly an impromptu surprise party again. Just how much Miss Funkhouser herself was in the know of the wedding march and rice-throwing no one can surmise. Anyway, whoever staged the demonstration must have been sufficiently in her good graces to venture the coup and to assemble as aids those who would know how to make it go over.

MRS. MARGARET O'HEAR, the grandmother of Miss Frances Howard, was, everyone admits, as young and lovely as any of the pretty girls receiving and assisting at the recent Knox-Howard debut party. She was seated in a comfortable arm chair, embowered in flowers, next to her granddaughter in the receiving line and was the recipient of so many loving handclaps and congratulations on her own behalf and on that of her granddaughter as well, that it could easily have been surmised by any onlooker that she was the guest of honor of the occasion.

ANOTHER delightful guest of the Knox-Howard debut party was Miss Enid Waldrup, one of the pupils now enrolled in the Tallulah Falls school. Miss Knox and Miss Howard are both members of the young ladies' circle of this institution. Little Miss Waldrup is the guest of Mrs. John K. Otley, president of the board of trustees of the Tallulah Falls school, for the Thanksgiving week-end and she was, on Wednesday afternoon, making her first appearance at any formal social function. Everyone must have envied her the sensations she must have been experiencing amid such unaccustomed and beautiful surroundings. Miss Waldrup is a very young and lovely girl. She has the charming, cultured manners that are taught to all the pupils at this institution and it is by no means too much to say that she won every heart present. She was wearing a very becoming dark green crepe de chine dress, a small hat and a corsage bouquet of violets. She will be the guest of Mrs. Jim Dickey for Friday and Saturday. Last night she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Patterson at a movie box party. In fact, she has been literally bombarded with invitations, of all kinds, and will on her return to Rabun county have memories that will give a new value and prove a new impetus to the studies she, and her companions, are pursuing there.

HERE are a few snapshots: Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn and Miss Peggy Poin-dexter were eyeing one another in the most delighted manner at the Knox-Howard debut party Wednesday afternoon. Mutual friends had told each of them so often that they resembled the other that they were taking advantage of this excellent opportunity to ascertain the real facts in the case. Mrs. Glenn was lovely in pale gray dress, hat, shoes, everything. Miss Poin-dexter's vivid youth and beauty was emphasized by the exquisite debut receiving gown she was wearing. Both are blondes. Mrs. Will Meadow was wearing a gown of king's blue crepe de chine almost the exact color of her eyes and with it a coat elaborately trimmed in light gray fur. Lovely Belva Mather was seen recently wearing an evening gown of turquoise blue velvet embroidered in rhinestones. The debutantes are still wearing corsage bouquets on all occasions. The Auburn football team, stopping at the Biltmore Wednesday night, was invited to attend the dinner-dance that evening. Their

Miss M. E. Williams Weds W. J. Wilkins In St. Luke Church

Of sincere interest to a wide circle of friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Martha Elizabeth Williams to Willis Jarrell Wilkins, which was solemnized at St. Luke's Episcopal church on Thursday morning by Rev. N. B. H. Moor in the presence of only the immediate families.

Mrs. Wilkins is the only daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Penn Millsaps and the late Claude E. Williams, and is a sister of William E. Williams. Her paternal grandfather was the late James B. Williams, first mayor of Atlanta after the Civil War. On her maternal side she is the granddaughter of the late William H. Penn, who was one of the most prominent citizens of Chattooga county. After attending school in Atlanta she completed her education at Gulf Park College, Gulfport, Miss.

Mr. Wilkins is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Willis J. Wilkins, of Eastman, Ga. Since leaving college he has been engaged in business in Atlanta, and on their return from their wedding journey they will be at home in the Virginia Court apartments.

Junior Orchestra To Hold Meeting.

coach, however, would not permit them to accept. They crowded in the foyer of the ballroom and gazed in the open door as if envying the more fortunate black-coats making merry below.

Miss Williamson and Mr. Childs Plight Troth at Home Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Williamson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Williamson, to Hugh Childs, son of Mrs. W. W. Childs, was impressively solemnized yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 655 West Peachtree street. The Rev. A. J. Monchick, Jr., pastor of the Oakland City Baptist church, performed the ceremony before a gathering of relatives and friends.

The home was artistically decorated with Cybodium ferns and palms. The mantle in the living room before which the ceremony was performed was banked with palms and ferns before which stood a mound of white chrysanthemums flanked with seven-branched candelabra embedded in mounds of white roses and chrysanthemums. The hallway through which the bridal party passed was garlanded with southern smilax and banked at intervals with palms and foliage plants.

Musical Program.—Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Edward Dugan, of Cartersville, soloist; Miss Mary Jeffingwell, violinist; and Mrs. J. W. Suggs, pianist, rendered an interesting program of musical music. "All For You" was softly sung during the ceremony. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was used as the processional.

Miss Mary Williamson, sister of the bride, who was maid of honor and her only attendant, wore a becoming model of light green chiffon fashioned with long waist and graceful skirt of unsewn hemline. The long, tight sleeves were a feature of the gown. A close fitting hat of silver metal cloth completed the costume. Her bouquet was a sheaf of Tallahassee roses tied with copper colored satin ribbon.

The Bride.—The bride, who was never more lovely than yesterday, was escorted by W. H. Williamson, by whom she was given in marriage and was met at the altar by the groom and his brother, W. W. Childs, who acted as best man. She wore a lovely gown of electric blue chiffon fashioned with deep lace bertha and graceful full skirt fashioned with uneven hem line. A close fitting hat of gold metal cloth completed the costume. Her bridal bouquet was a sheaf of Pernet roses and lilies of the valley, showered with lilies of the valley and tied with streamers of yellow satin ribbon.

Mrs. Williamson, mother of the bride, wore a straight line model of black velvet offset with a shoulder bouquet of Sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Childs, mother of the groom, wore a model of black crepe de chine, fashioned along straight lines. A shoulder bouquet of Sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley adorned her shoulder.

The Reception.—Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home. The dining room was effectively decorated in palms and ferns, a mound of pastel-colored flowers banking the buffet. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Childs, were Mrs. W. W. Childs, Jr., Mrs. Clarisse Glass and Mrs. Charles Strawn. Miss Mary Ruth Moore served punch. Miss Mildred Williamson, sister of the bride, kept the bride's book. Mr. and Mrs. Childs left for a wedding trip to Florida. Upon their return they will make their home on Peachtree place.

Tulane Wave Ends Season Unbeaten

Georgia Triumphs Over Tide But Has Yet To Meet Tech, Ancient Rival.

A Wildcat roaming at large over the snow-blanketed blue grass of One Katnuck, turned its full fury on Tennessee at Lexington Thursday to tie the mighty Volunteers and keep the boys from Knoxville from an undisputed Southern Conference football championship.

Figures give Tulane's Green Wave a clean record and claim to the title by virtue of their season's final game and victory over the Louisiana State Tigers.

For three years and 29 football games the Volunteers have swept ahead over opposition, often of championship caliber, without a loss. Twice have those Wildcats from the bluegrass been smothered by the Tide, but in the last year and this.

Tulane owes its position in the conference today to those Wildcats, for with a victory over Kentucky combined with the caliber of teams beaten this season by the Vols, Tennessee would have had the conference championship in the bag, despite the victory of the Greens over Louisiana State.

There are a few games remaining to be played within the conference but these, to be fought out Saturday, will have no effect upon the standing of the leaders. The race came to an end Thursday, so far as the major teams are concerned.

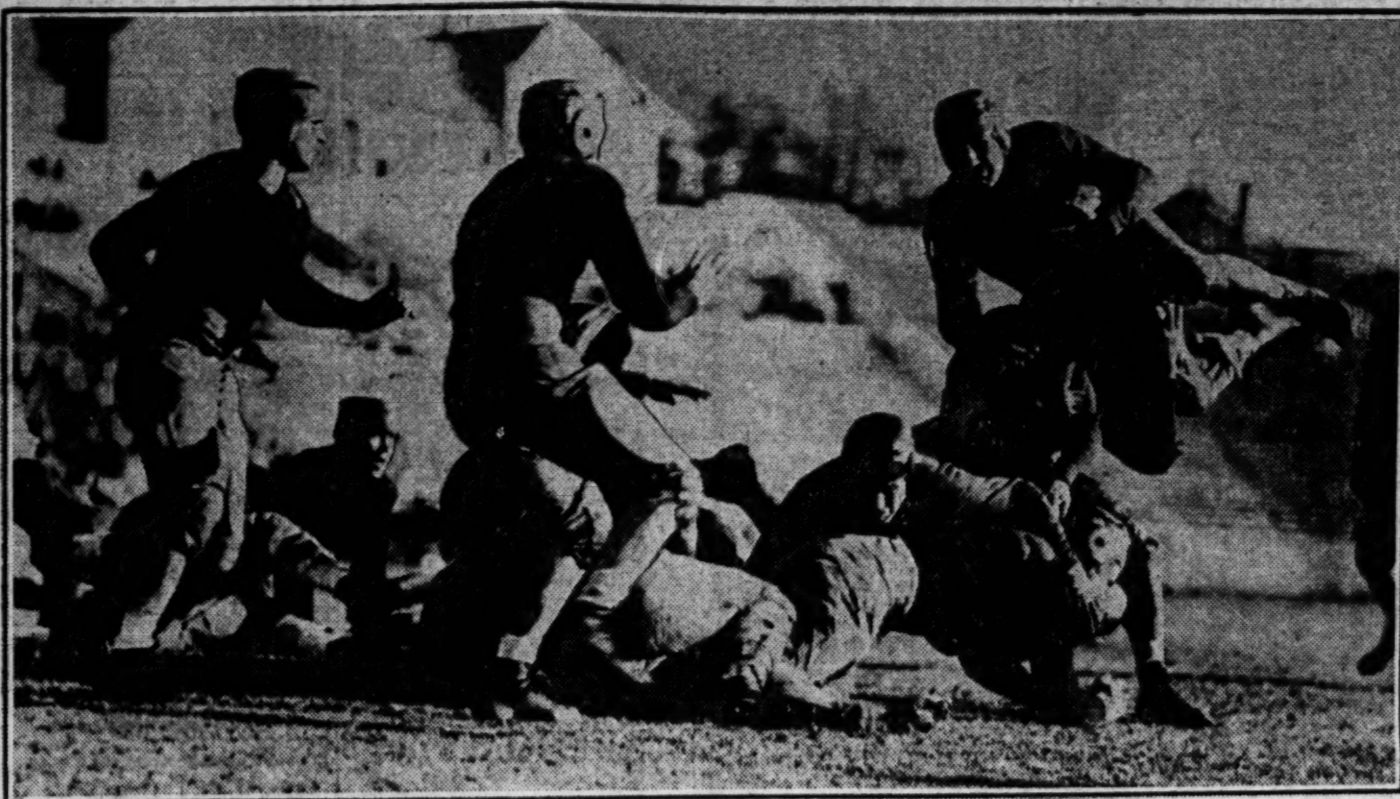

Georgia's upset of Alabama's Crimson Tide was the outstanding conference battle of the day, with the sole exception of the championship affair at Lexington. The Bulldogs rose to great heights to stop Holm and the other tearing backs of the Tide and score two touchdowns to add to Georgia's other impressive victories of the year.

Next Saturday will see the traditional rivalry of Georgia and Georgia Tech together in a conference tilt that will not have a bearing on the standings but will bring thousands of fans to Athens. It will be a game in which anything can and probably will happen.

Florida, also boasting an excellent record of six victories and one defeat, that to Georgia Tech, had no trouble in disposing of Washington and Lee at Jacksonville.

Vanderbilt, playing an annual rival, the Sewanee Tiger, displayed drive and power, much more than needed, for victory.

Stumpy's Last Game at the Flats

Stumpy Thomason, Georgia Tech's bounding halfback, is shown above as he took to the air in an effort to carry the ball out of bounds in the game with the Tigers of Auburn at Grant field Thursday afternoon. The ball went out of bounds all right. Stumpy closed his career on Grant field in the game. For four seasons he has stormed and dashed over the chalk lines here. He will wind up his time as a member of the Yellow Jackets on December 7, when the Jackets go to Athens to meet Georgia's Bulldogs. The photo was taken by the Associated Press.

Carnegie Tech Blanks N. Y. U.

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Carnegie Tech's red jerseyed horde of ball hawks brought an assortment of forward passes to Yankee stadium today, so bewildering to New York University that the Violets never did find out what they were all about and the Pittsburghers won the Thanksgiving game 20 to 0.

New York University kept its record of not winning games on Thanksgiving Day clear and Carnegie Tech made a new record by defeating New York for the first time. However, the two teams have played only four games.

Davis and Elkins Ends Undeclared

ELKINS, W. Va., Nov. 28.—(United News.)—Davis and Elkins closed its regular season with a decisive 37 to 6 victory over Salem College. The game was played in a driving mountain snow.

Coch Henderson used his regulars only one quarter. Smith scored two touchdowns in six minutes.

On December 7 Davis and Elkins, undefeated in 10 games, will go to Oklahoma City for a post-season contest.

last Thanksgiving game Tech and Auburn will play on Grant field, Florida will be there next year. It was the fifteenth year in succession that Tech and Auburn had met on this venerable day and, as usual, a fight resulted.

Right at the start of the game Tech was in imminent danger of scoring but the stubbornness of the Auburn line, coupled with the inability of the team to click with regularity, staved off the touchdowns until the second quarter. Auburn received Thomason's 58-yard kickoff, Young running it back to his own 27-yard line. Three plays failed to bring 10 yards and Davidson went back to punt.

Shag Williams broke through the line and went bounding back to Auburn's 11-yard line where Williams fell on it. Mizell and Thomason reeled off 2 yards apiece and then Tech drew an offside penalty. On fourth down Mizell threw a short pass which H. Long inadvertently intercepted. Realizing that he should have slapped the ball down, he threw it upon the ground and Tech had the ball on Auburn's 7-yard line and four downs to cross the goal.

The drive failed on Auburn's 2-yard line. Tech drew an offside penalty. On fourth down Mizell threw a short pass which H. Long inadvertently intercepted. Realizing that he should have slapped the ball down, he threw it upon the ground and Tech had the ball on Auburn's 7-yard line and four downs to cross the goal.

It wasn't so terribly long after the first quarter ended with the scoreboard flashing 0-0 that Tech had made it 6-0. When the opening period was over Tech was on Auburn's 48-yard line. It was fourth down and Mizell punted 36 yards out of bounds on the 12-yard line.

Jones, of Auburn, got off a punt that was high and short. It hit the ground and went bounding back to the Auburn goal line, stopping 12 yards from that point, where several Jackets fell on it. Time was taken out here by Auburn.

Three plays, with Mizell hoofing twice and Thomason the other time, netted 6 yards and then Newton spilled Mizell for a 5-yard loss and the ball went over. Jones punted out 30 yards and Thomason returned it 6 yards.

Tech Goes in Air.

Here Tech went in the air. Dunlap whanged a high one to Mizell, who caught and made a couple of yards before Auburn's secondary, which had dropped back, nailed him. He had gained 20 yards all told. Mizell made one of his old-time driving, powerful slashes off right tackle and made 7 yards. Then Stumpy went twisting and tearing around right end for 7 more and the touchdown. He failed to place-kick for the extra point.

Although Tech kicked off it didn't lose possession of the ball and hammered right back down there for another touchdown. Thomason made an on-side kick, the ball falling free of all players. Tom Jones pounced on it on Auburn's 32-yard line. Stumpy Thomason went out of bounds for no gain.

Then Dunlap took it on himself to run with the football. He set out for left tackle and galloped through a large opening there. Cutting back he got past the secondary and outran the Auburn safety to scramble 32 yards for the second touchdown. Andrews blocked Stumpy's try for the extra point but Tech was ahead by the comfortable margin and everyone was slightly surprised by the suddenness of those two touchdowns, which had revealed a new power in the Jackets.

It was, needless to say, a satisfactory revelation.

ALEX SENDS IN SUBS.

Deciding that his 60-minute men could do with a rest, Alexander sent in some substitutes and they battled around with Auburn until the end of the half, which wasn't so far away. Doug Graydon was in there and he slashed through the Tiger line for several substantial gains.

Tech's next touchdown march—although it should be called a gallop, because it was so fast—started with the same lineup that started the game. A couple of minutes after it opened Davidson got off a long, high, booming 62-yard punt, one of the most prodigious kicks Grant field patrons have seen this year.

Thomason, standing near his goal line reached for the ball and barely touched it. The ball went bounding over the goal and Stumpy right after it. He scrambled around back of the goal line, picked up the ball and got away just in time to keep from being tackled for a safety. As it was, they tumbled him on the 2-yard line.

Tech naturally punted out, Mizell kicking 42 yards, the ball falling dead on the Jackets' 43-yard line. Long twice and Hatfield once gained 14 yards and Auburn seemed to be going somewhere.

DUNLAP SNAGS PASS.

On the next play Dunlap drifted into the Tiger backfield and changed the complexion of things. They tried a double pass, something went wrong, the ball shot up in the air and Dunlap grabbed it and was away.

He caught Auburn flat-footed and before they got going Dunlap was 25 yards down the field with the Tech team behind him and Auburn behind the Jackets. Stumpy kicked goal and the score was 19 to 0 and seemed likely to remain that way. If this man Davidson, of the Auburn backfield, hadn't wiggled around the line and made that mad 50-yard dash, it might have remained that way.

Alex had sent in substitutes again and Graydon was ripping and tearing through there in a beautiful manner. Auburn had just received a punt and shoved the ball to midfield for a first down when Davidson broke loose. The Tech team set out after him and Frink caught him just in time. After Long failed to gain, Hatfield bounced off right tackle and over the line for the score, which ruined the day for the boys who had given Auburn 12 points.

Shortly afterwards the game ended with Tech headed by Graydon, battering through the Tigers, headed for a score.

Figures Prove Tech Superior

Georgia Tech's superiority over Auburn can easily be shown and proved by the figures of the yards gained and lost by various attacks. Tech gained 288 yards against only 153 for Auburn and doubled the number of first downs made by Auburn. Tech proved its superior punting with an average of 37 yards against 31 for Auburn.

A pair of touchdowns dashes by Eustace Mills here this afternoon, one for 50 yards and the other for 80, gave the Wake Forest Deacons a 13-0 victory over the Bears of Mercer University.

The Deacon flash scored first early in the first quarter as he took Alexander's punt in midfield and with hardly any interference took it over. His second dash came in the fourth period after the Deacons had stopped a couple of Bear threats by intercepting passes.

Covington grabbed a Mercer heave on his own 20-yard line and was stopped without gain. On the next play, however, Mills went around right end, side-stepping several Bears, shook off three tacklers, and crossed the goal line.

their way through the Boys' High line.

Featured by the splendid kicking of Elliott, whose all-around play was the high light of the Boys' High game, the visitors got inside Lanier territory only on two occasions, but an alert Post defense hurled back these charges.

Lanier led in first downs, 10 to 5, but the third period found Boys' High supplying all of the fireworks, as Lanier's famed "hidden ball" attack failed to function against a strong Boys' High line that pivoted around the powerful shoulders of Gardner, left tackle. Donehoo thrilled the holiday crowd with a spectacular run on a reverse play in this period. He traveled 16 yards before Eason encountered him at full speed, and the flying Boys' High quarterback was credited with 15 yards before he stopped digging.

G. M. C. Licks Gordon, 27-12.

Ancient hostilities were renewed today on the gridiron between the Georgia Military College and Gordon Institute, of Gainesville. G. M. C. emerging victor by a score of 27 to 12 after fighting through the first half with its back to the wall.

Gordon Institute showed plenty of fight during the first half with Parks, Owens and Dobbs carrying the brunt of the offensive. A feature of the second half was the running back of a kickoff 70 yards by Johnson for Gainesville. For G. M. C. the all-around playing of Bachelor, Tommy Rich and Bazanos was of high merit. Bazanos' blocking and cutting being outstanding in every play. Bachelor and McClelland excelled in gains through Gordon's line repeatedly.

Lanier Sinks Cadets, 33 to 0.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 28.—(AP)—A vicious, hard charging Lanier line paved the way for a decisive victory for the Poets over Georgia Military academy of College Park here today, 33 to 0, before a crowd estimated at 4,000. The Orange and Green line-men blocked two punts in the Cadets' territory in the first quarter, completely stopped the visitors' running plays, and drove great holes in the G. M. A. line through which the Lanier backs pranced gracefully to victory. The Poets' victory over the Cadets leaves them undefeated in the southern half of the G. I. A. A., and it is expected that they will meet G. M. C. of Milledgeville, in the southern half playoff at an early date.

VANDY WHIPS SEWANEE, 26-6

McGaughey Leads Commodores to Victory in Final Game.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 28.—(AP) Led by a dashing halfback, Paul McGaughey, who scored four touchdowns, Vanderbilt tramped over the light University of the South eleven, 26 to 6, here today in a game which marked the end of the season for the two teams.

Nearly 9,000 fans witnessed the traditional Thanksgiving Day struggle, oldest of southern rivalry.

Sewanee, outplayed throughout the battle, saw its only hope of scoring left to the arm of Bobby Worrall, midget halfback, and it was the latter's 40-yard heave to Cravens, Tiger captain, late in the final period that paved the way for a touchdown. Worrall carried the ball over from the 3-yard line.

For the first time during the season, Coach Dan McGugin started his full second team. With the regulars on the bench, Sewanee battled the Gold and Black on even terms throughout the first period which was scoreless. The Commodores threatened, however, when Johnny Askew, quarterback, intercepted a long pass from Worrall on Vandy's 28-yard line and raced 70 yards to the Tiger 4-yard stripe. Rosenblatt's fumble lost the ball on the 2-yard mark.

With the regulars going in at the start of the second period, the Commodores began their sustained drives down the field for four touchdowns. The broken-field running "Mouse" Leonard, and the line plunges of Benny Parker and McWhain, aided materially in placing the ball within scoring distance.

Tiny St. Mary's Whips Oregon

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—(AP) St. Mary's college, whose stalwart eleven was plucked from a tiny student body of 700, completed its season without defeat by overwhelming a powerful University of Oregon team today, 31 to 6.

The grand finale to a brilliant season saw St. Mary's scored upon for the first time this year, but the records of 1929 gridiron history reveal that it is one of the few teams that have not had to admit superiority to another.

Marist, Fulton Postpone Game

Marist College and Fulton High cancelled their game scheduled for Thanksgiving morning on the Marist campus. The Fulton team, after a bad season, in which it did not score a touchdown, disbanded several days ago. Marist has enjoyed one of its best seasons.

Georgians Get Sington Out and Hammer Through Line, Around Ends to Win.

ship and handling. Three times they were within the 20-yard line and not once did they seriously threaten. They lacked fire and dash and had it not been for Tony Holm they would have been beaten by a tremendous score. It was "Jack the Ripper" Roberts that Mehre used as a hammer in the early minutes of the game. He was sent in to see what could be done with the line and he saw. There have been many fine moments this year but none finer than the first touchdown by Georgia when the stout Alabama line was defending its goal.

Georgia had come from nowhere, sweeping on the line on the wings of a forward pass that rode 28 yards. They had come from the 46-yard line to the 13 in just three plays, including that pass. Roberts was called on. Red Leathers stood up. He seemed to wave him on. The whole stands knew they were going to try Sington again. Sington who was weakening under the pounding he was getting.

In came "Jack the Ripper" Roberts, and back rolled the Crimson Tide. Jack Roberts ripped through for 10-12 yards, a gallant dash that almost scored.

They called him again, and again that Georgia line gathered itself and again the play was at Sington. Roberts ripped into the line. He went over but they shoved him back. It was second down. This time they made sure. Leathers opened a hole and Roberts shot through so that he was 2 yards past the line.

HALTED RUSH.
A fumble stopped Alabama's rush in the second period. Downes recovered Long's fumble at the Georgia 14-yard line. Chandler punted out of there a mere 55 yards to make things safe for Georgia. He was kicking in a grand fashion. That second Georgia touchdown came in six plays from the Alabama 45-yard line. Suther's short punt from deep in his own territory was out of bounds. The Alabama line was minus Sington then.

Georgia had a superior football team. All roads may lead to Rome but there is just one leading to Legion field. That service to the crowd but they were coming fast and crowding the gates at five minutes before the kick-off.

A Goodyear dirigible flew over the field several times with the occupants waving wildly.

Alabama sent in two teams at ten minutes before the game was called. They looked big and showed plenty of speed in their signal runs up and down the field. Up in the press box the crowd could be heard asking to have Sington and Holm, the Alabama stars, identified.

Georgia came in and warmed up and then retired until just before the kick-off. They came streaming on to a great roar from the crowd.

The officials conferred, the captains met and the coin was pitched. Alabama won, and choice to kick. The crowd was still buying tickets and pouring in the gate.

Fred Sington, the south's outstanding lineman, dropped back for the kick-off. A hush came over the crowd but he broke into a high, strident yell as Sington and the Red line moved forward under the kick.

The ball tumbled end over end to the three-yard line where Johnny Davidson gathered it in and strode off to his 20-yard line. A penalty for off-side helped in the first thrusts at the Alabama line but the attack was stopped and Catfish Smith punted to Alabama's 43-yard line, where it was grounded.

Alabama had the wind with them and Holm kicked on first down. It was a high kick that romped along with the wind to go behind the goal line.

Georgia took up the march at her own 20. The Bulldogs started in mistreating the Alabama line. He hammered for a first down with the aid of an offside penalty.

Bobby Waugh lost three yards. They and the Georgians were still marching through. Rothstein got 7 and Dickens went around right end for 12 yards. He ran as airily and as gracefully as a dancing master showing some new steps. A holding penalty hurt Alabama and Georgia took the ball at the 12-yard line, drew an offside penalty and then got 2 yards of it back on a Rothstein buck.

On the first play as the new quarter dawned Austie Downes, flying along like a seagull skimming the waves, went 17 yards around his own right end. He didn't need any block. The Alabama line was caught flat-footed. He crossed the line without a man diving for him.

Alabama seems to have a slight edge in some of the statistics but Georgia has an edge in the ball game. That happens to be important. Georgia made the most first downs, 13 to 11. Georgia gained 177 yards from snap, and Alabama 201.

It was in passes, as this correspondent dared suggest before the game, that Georgia proved superior. Georgia tried but four complete passes, one of them being largely responsible for a touchdown, the first one. Alabama tried 11 passes and completed two for a gain of 12 yards. One Alabama pass was intercepted and that interception paved the way for the second touchdown.

LEADERSHIP.
Georgia had good leadership today with Paris and Austie Downes at quarter. Downes ran the team perfectly and he was in for the most of the game. He handled it well while he was at the helm.

The Georgia backfield was co-ordinated and worked with an assurance that was remarkable to see. They were the best football team. This was no upset whereby an inspired football team beats a better one. The best football team won today.

Georgia had three scoring chances and cashed in on two of them. Alabama had three and cashed not a one. Downes and Dickens did some of the finest backflying that has been seen this fall. They seemed to possess more elusiveness, more speed and more stamina than the players from the Alabama line.

Alabama played courageously and hard. They tried, but the leadership and the smartness was not there. They were simply up against a superior football team.

All roads may lead to Rome but there is just one leading to Legion field. That service to the crowd but they were coming fast and crowding the gates at five minutes before the kick-off.

Sington Suffers 3 Broken Ribs

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 23.—Freddie Sington, star guard of the Alabama football team, was reported to have suffered three broken ribs in the game with Georgia today. He lasted but 12 minutes and the first touchdown was scored over him. Sington is rated as one of the greatest guards in the south and is practically assured of an All-Southern position.

gave the ball to this Jack Roberts and he took it 11 full yards. He came right back for them for three yards and another first down.

The Georgia offense, that was clicking along like a high-powered sewing machine, halted because of a fumble and a bust of signals. Smith kicked well down the field and Red Leathers took the ball at Alabama's 17-yard line.

That high-powered Alabama offense the boys from over Athens was heard so much about wasn't so impressive just then. They stopped Spiner's heated wish just a couple of yards and Tony Holm got just as many. No more.

Holm punted and Paris took the ball on the 40-yard line. Robert the Ripper came jauntily around Alabama's left end for eight yards and Chandler came zipping through for two and a first down.

By that time the crowd was beginning to get a little weary. The Georgia backfield were not only gaining in the Alabama line but they were banging right through Freddie Sington, the guard they have scored the greatest of the game.

Red Leathers was putting up a great battle. Sington was having his hands full. So full were they that they began to slip over the edge. The ball was at Alabama's 41-yard line. Johnny Davidson masked a pass and tossed it over to Herb Maffett, who had been playing a great game, and suddenly began to appear unsteady. Indeed, Maffett reached up somewhere near the peak of Red mountain and took that football. He ran 8 yards for a total gain of 29 yards, while the crowd of Georgians went mad. That pass hasn't been stopped all year.

JACK AGAIN.
Jack the Ripper took that football right through Freddie Sington for 10 full yards. He went 2 yards on the next play. He really went over the line a full yard, but was shoved back and the referee failed to see it. That being the case, Jack the Ripper ripped Sington into shreds and made the touchdown again. He had made the ball over from the 33-yard line in three plays. All of them through Fred Sington.

The kick for the extra point was blocked by Holm Smith.

Holm took the kickoff and brought it back 22 yards. It was Alabama's ball on her own 31-yard line. Vines made a couple, but this man Holm broke off tackle, his own left, and went trudging a full 33 yards down field. Tommy Paris saved the day with a great lunging run.

With the ball at Georgia's 37-yard line the Crimson Tide started in passing. For some reason or other Vines called four in a row, losing the ball on downs. It was not very smart football.

Waugh, Chandler and Roberts promptly made a first down. It was the sixth and their first quarter had still another minute to run.

By this time Red Leathers had Freddie Sington very discouraged, indeed. He was so discouraged that he was given medical attention. The irrepressibles hadn't won the football game, but they had done something no one else had done—score a touchdown through the Alabama line.

ROPER NAMES MIDDIES, IRISH TO WIN GAMES

Army Will Push Notre Dame—Service Teams Healthy.

By W. W. Roper.

Princeton Football Coach. (Copyright, 1929, by The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

The outstanding football games tomorrow are the Army-Notre Dame contest in New York, and the Dartmouth-Navy battle in Philadelphia.

On past performance, both Notre Dame and Dartmouth should be heavy favorites, but I am going to be rash enough to predict that the Army will give Notre Dame a close game, and that the Navy will come out on top.

The Georgia backfield were not only gaining in the Alabama line but they were banging right through Freddie Sington, the guard they have scored the greatest of the game.

Red Leathers was putting up a great battle. Sington was having his hands full. So full were they that they began to slip over the edge. The ball was at Alabama's 41-yard line. Johnny Davidson masked a pass and tossed it over to Herb Maffett, who had been playing a great game, and suddenly began to appear unsteady. Indeed, Maffett reached up somewhere near the peak of Red mountain and took that football. He ran 8 yards for a total gain of 29 yards, while the crowd of Georgians went mad. That pass hasn't been stopped all year.

JACK AGAIN.
Jack the Ripper took that football right through Freddie Sington for 10 full yards. He went 2 yards on the next play. He really went over the line a full yard, but was shoved back and the referee failed to see it. That being the case, Jack the Ripper ripped Sington into shreds and made the touchdown again. He had made the ball over from the 33-yard line in three plays. All of them through Fred Sington.

The kick for the extra point was blocked by Holm Smith.

Holm took the kickoff and brought it back 22 yards. It was Alabama's ball on her own 31-yard line. Vines made a couple, but this man Holm broke off tackle, his own left, and went trudging a full 33 yards down field. Tommy Paris saved the day with a great lunging run.

With the ball at Georgia's 37-yard line the Crimson Tide started in passing. For some reason or other Vines called four in a row, losing the ball on downs. It was not very smart football.

Waugh, Chandler and Roberts promptly made a first down. It was the sixth and their first quarter had still another minute to run.

By this time Red Leathers had Freddie Sington very discouraged, indeed. He was so discouraged that he was given medical attention. The irrepressibles hadn't won the football game, but they had done something no one else had done—score a touchdown through the Alabama line.

Pitt Defeats Nittany, 20-7

By Herb Clark.

Grateful accepting Thanksgiving Day one of rest, the yearling squads of Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia will resume preparations this afternoon for their battle Saturday.

Both squads are expected to take light signal drills as the final step in the training for their clash at Grant field Saturday afternoon.

From all indications the struggle between the two freshman teams will be as bitterly contested as a varsity clash with a title at stake. The rivalry between the two schools has saturated the spirits of the rats, and they will be out to do battle to the death, if need be, to grasp victory.

The Baby Bulldogs have been hard at work on their playground at Athens, scrimmaging the varsity at all possible moments in the drive to be in top form for the assault on the Tech yard.

Last Saturday the Athens frosh fell before the dash of the young Titans of Alabama by a 45-0 score.

The Bulldogs are driving for the scalp of the Junior Jackets. Scrimmages have kept them busy. Their record this season—as well as the past year—shows the number of experienced stars on their roster—indicates that they have a strong team.

Junior Jackets will find their hands full Saturday.

The Baby Bulldogs will probably find themselves in that same fix. Tech's rats have likewise a fair record for the season and have likewise a motley crew of youngsters who brought good reputations from prep school.

The Junior Jackets have also scrimmaged hard during the past few days. Fighting to a scoreless tie with the South Carolina frosh last Saturday, the Tech rats were exposed to a weakness of attack which had not been present in previous games. Prior to last Saturday it had been the defensive problem of the Jackets. Against the Biddies, however, the defense halted a powerful and versatile offense without permitting a single play, though twice the Biddies were within the Tech 10-yard zone. The offense, on the other hand, was hampered by fumbles and suffered from a lack of drive.

FAIR TO STOP.
They didn't stop the next three rushes. Campbell and Holm took the ball on down to the 14-yard line. And right there, gentlemen of the jury, the old Red courage, instilled by the old red clay of Georgia, arose and the Alabama attack, threatening for the second time in the game and mighty anxious to do something, was stopped. Tony Holm went ramming in and got 3 yards. Campbell spun in for 2 more.

They gave the ball to Tony, the lone wolf. Red Maddox, who had played one of the greatest games at guard that any mortal man ever played, broke through and smeared Tony over 3 or 4 yards of turf for a loss of 1 yard. Jim Moore came around on a double pass and they threw him for a loss of 4 yards and took the football.

Georgia held the fort. They started in then, the boys from Athens way, and ran slap into what looked like disaster. On the second play Catfish fumbled and Moore recovered for Alabama.

The boys from over Athens were in the acid again but there was nothing but gold in that defense.

ANOTHER STAND.
They ran Tony Holm, the greatest back in the south, according to popular acclaim, and he gained a total of 1 yard in those three tries.

A pass on fourth down was batted down. The ball was Georgia's. Old Man Opportunity rapped three times, twice very insistently, and not a single time could Alabama answer. Georgia kept advancing the ball. Rothstein made a first down and then, just as the game ended, Seagull Dickens, one of the two in the backfield, went hitting 19 yards down the field. Alabama's last memory was of a Georgia back on the wing even as their memory at the half had been of a Georgia back on the loose.

It was a great football game and the smartest and most versatile team won. Georgia offered a team that showed all the earmarks of excellent coaching. It was the first time their backfield had been intact and in condition since the Florida game and they played today with a spirit and a dash that stamped them as one of the great teams in the conference.

THIRD QUARTER.
There were 15 yards to go and on the very first play of the very last quarter Seagull Dickens took a long run and swerving around his own right end after a fake line buck had fooled Alabama. He went sailing, sailing, sailing the 17 yards and there was the second touchdown. Rothstein's attempt at the point was low and blocked.

Holm took the kickoff from Rothstein's toe and hustled back 38 yards. The game was happening according to the books. The papers didn't hint at a hearted at it. Not many of them, anyhow.

Alabama worried around with line plays and aided by an offside penalty, made a first down. Georgia stopped Holm and a pass but the next pass worked, 22 yards of it unrolling down the field, Holm throwing it to Moore.

Campbell and Campbell, working in succession, advanced the ball steadily into the line. The Georgia forwards must have been a bit worried by it. The play was gaining no great distance but it was gaining 3 and 4 yards at a clip.

They drove the ball to Georgia's 27-yard line. Georgia took time out and the boys dropped back in a huddle to look the situation over.

Bluegrass Eleven Plays Fine Game To Balk Vols' Hopes.

took up the trip-hammer attack again. In two plays Spicer gave the Blue a first down on Tennessee's 7-yard line.

Spicer Scores.
The Vols crowded eight men into the line of scrimmage and three times Spicer drove his stocky body into the mass and lacked a yard of a touch-down. On the fourth play Spicer drove a squad of Tennesseans over the line and scored. Captain Covington's place-kick came nowhere near crossing the bar. But those 6 points looked like the works. Tennessee had shown no sign of an offense. Tennessee looked tired. Tennessee played frankly as if longing for the final shot. Their hands were frost-bitten and their ears were blue.

Three who had watched Tennessee for three years always in front, never behind, in a football game, wondered what Coach Neyland's youngsters would do in the clutch.
There were about nine minutes left to play. Kentucky tried an outside kick off but the ball sailed right into the arms of Hickman, a substitute left guard. That was a break for the Vols for it gave them a start near midfield. Hack and Mack actually slipped through for a first down. It was the first time they had been able to move the chain. Dodd wisely took to the air but the passing attack was broken up. Kentucky promptly punted back and this time Spicer intercepted Dodd's first down pass. Covington, still playing safe, punted on third down, but the ball sliced only 10 yards out of bounds. That break gave Tennessee another chance in mid-field.

Using a backward pass play to help him get 25 yards behind the line of scrimmage, Dodd shot another one on first down but again the alert Spicer pulled it out of the air. That one seemed to eliminate the possibility of Tennessee's scoring, for less than four minutes remained on the watch.

McEver in Action.
A 15-yard assessment and another for 5 killed the Wildcats' chances of running the ball far and Covington kicked. McEver caught it and for the first time in the game was able to elude the Wildcat punt coverage. He came back over the snow for 15 yards and was down on Kentucky's 43-yard line. Using the backward pass from McEver, Dodd dropped far back and threw a fine cross-field spiral toward his left end. "Shipwreck" Kelly broke that one up.
Less than three minutes were left. Again Dodd dropped back, faked a forward pass and sold out through the

Captain Long Gains for Auburn

Above is shown Captain H. Long, of Auburn's Tigers, circling left end for a 4-yard gain in the second-quarter of the game with Georgia Tech Thursday afternoon. Long, who was converted from a guard to a fullback just two weeks ago, was a big gun in the Tiger attack. On the play above he was just about to get loose for a substantial gain at left end when he lost his interference. The Jacket secondary brought him down. Photo by Kenneth Rogers, Constitution staff photographer.

Hackman Never On Losing Team

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 28.—(United News.)—While the Kentucky Wildcats held the Tennessee Vols to a 6-6 tie today, Buddy Hackman, who scored the Vols' only touchdown, thereby preserved a record unique in American football. Hackman never has played on a losing team in four years at high school and two years at Tennessee.

scattered Kentucky defense for 9 yards.

Once more Dodd faded back, took the flip from McEver and waited. Hackman sped on and outran the tired Spicer in the Blue secondary. As Hackman turned to look for the ball there it was, as perfect a throw as a lad ever made with a lanky football. Hackman took it in over his shoulder and sped on. He was blocked out of bounds on the 4-yard line by Covington.

It looked like a touchdown, though. Coach Neyland rushed Koblase, a reliable drop-kicker, into the game for Decker, the fullback. However, when it was learned that four yards were left, Coach Neyland had to hustle Paul Heydrick, a hard charging back, into action to assure the touchdown. Hackman slanted off tackle for the marker on the second play, and Heydrick, an unskilled place-kicker, made a fine effort and missed by that foot of snowflakes.

The game ended with Kentucky rushing down the field still too strong to be stopped but not lucky enough to win.

DRURY'S GREATEST GAME.

Carey Spicer and Jack Phillips with 68 and 75 yards gained from scrimmage, respectively, were outstanding in the Wildcat offense. But it primarily was the aggressive play of the gigantic forward wall that made their determined running good. Pete Drury, the giant tackle, closed out a brilliant three-year tour of Kentucky's right tackle with what his coaches declare is the best game he ever played. Drury must have broken McEver in two a dozen times and was mainly responsible for holding the great halfback to a meager gain of 16 yards. Forquer and Williams were superb both on offense and defense. They tore the gaps in the Tennessee defense through Phillips and Spicer and twisted along.

The outstanding figure in the Tennessee rush line was Saunders, a substitute tackle, who was by far the fastest, most determined man in the Orange defense. And Bobby Dodd, untrifled and untrifled, remains the coolest, smartest quarterback your correspondent has seen in many a day. He had no effective weapons save a punt and a pass but he got all out of them.

It was another of those Thanksgiving Days in old Kentucky (time out for profanity). It was the perfect alibi for a photographer. Morning broke cold as a miser's heart and soon from the leaden sky came snow. It snowed slightly at first and by noon the air was white with it. Part melted and lay in wait to spill ambitious halfbacks on their ears. And part clung to the green bluegrass of the gridiron, giving it a silvery hue. At same time it was still snowing. Visibility was poor for forward passing and, indeed, for reporting properly.

BR-R-R COLD!

However, they are used to this sort of day in Kentucky. The 20,000 people that filled the stadium and temporary bleachers at each end were bundled in heavy overcoats and wrapped in blankets. Only to the delicate visitors from Knoxville and the even more sheltered plants from Atlanta did it seem miserable weather. This game would not have drawn 5,000 people in Atlanta, it was that cold.

Before the game started the Kentucky team was presented with a new Wildcat in a stout cage. The vicious-looking creature was caught in the wilds of Rowan county by James Hall, a 15-year-old boy who hopes to come down and play on the Kentucky football team some day. Hall dragged the animal out of a hole by the hind legs. That's the sort of boys they get up here. They ought to sign him right now as a tackle.

To the winner of this game annually goes the custody of a keg. In other days this historic keg might have contained beer. It is the same size and shape as a beer keg anyhow. The keg has not been in existence as long as the brown jug of Michigan, nor the old oaken bucket of Purdue, but it has contained just as much joy for the winners and just as many headaches for the losers. And I want to say this for the Tennesseans: They spent last night on the sixth floor of the Phoenix hotel. Outside in the street, collegians, mostly their own followers, were yelling and whooping and setting off firecrackers all night long. The hubbub was shaking the windows when your correspondent went to sleep from exhaustion at 2 a. m. That the Volunteers were even able to stay awake during the football game reflects great credit on their endurance. It surely was no place for a football team to try to sleep, especially when that team had won 29 games without defeat. It must have made the battle today seem like a trunk on the back.

For two consecutive years now Kentucky has tied Tennessee out of a claim to the championship. Last year Tennessee gained an' gained and could not score. Today Kentucky rushed the ball 226 yards to the enemy's 76 yards, yet could not win. A strange fatality it seems marks this series of games. And down in old New Orleans they are acclaiming the Green Wave champions of these southern states. They should raise at least one cheer for the Blue Wildcats and not forget the Volunteers, who cannot win and cannot lose.

NOTRE DAME, MINUS ROCKNE, HEADED EAST

Irish Face Most Important Test Against Army Team Saturday.

By Frank Getty.

United News Sports Editor.
NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(United News.)—Leaving behind them their coach, Knute Rockne, whose wizardry in football affairs has come to be proverbial, Notre Dame's gridiron warriors were en route Thursday in quest of their season's most important game.
Unbeaten and untied, and easily the outstanding eleven of 1929, the Irish of Notre Dame had one more hurdle to take before attaining recognition as the year's greatest team.
On Saturday, before 83,000 spectators in Yankee stadium, the Irish must defeat a powerful Army team which has yet to give its best in what has been for Head Coach "Biff" Jones, serving his last term in charge of football at West Point, a most disappointing season.

KNUTE AT HOME.
Recovering from an infected leg, Knute Rockne had to remain in South Bend as his squad steamed away, followed by a special train of Notre Dame rooters. For a week the head coach of the Irish, who is credited with being able to teach more football than any other man, has been unable to instruct his boys through the final practice sessions for the Army game.
Man after man, however, has been called to Rockne's bedside and instructed as to his particular duties in the all-important game against the Cadets. The Irish have met and beaten stronger teams this season than the one they will face Saturday, but never was a game more important to a team's prestige and record than this contest with the Army.

While the Irish will be in there fighting for their coach, the Cadets will be equally determined to give their best for "Biff" Jones.
Captain Chris Cagle, All-America halfback of 1928, hasn't been able to get going this season. It will be his last game and he will give everything he has, as will Murrell and other Army stars who are hanging up their moleskins forever after Saturday's game.

With sentiment on the part of both elevens thus added to indomitable fighting spirit, the coming game promises to go down into gridiron history as one of the greatest of the Army-Notre Dame series, despite the apparent disparagement in the strength of the contending elevens.

Camels have always welcomed comparison with any other cigarette because the true test of value is the pleasure to be found in smoking.

The most important thing for smokers to know is that genuine cigarette quality must begin with the selection of tobaccos. Nothing can take the place of quality tobacco. Thus the extraordinary goodness of Camels begins with the choicest tobaccos grown and these are blended with expert skill to achieve the mildness and surpassing fragrance of this great cigarette. It is this genuineness of quality which smokers appreciate when they have passed the experimental stage and know real smoking pleasure.

THE SON OF TARZAN No. 5

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The serious young Oxford man made their interview a disturbing one for Lady Greytokes. "Jack is exceptionally intelligent," he explained, "but he takes no interest in the subjects we study. Only feelings of strength appeal to him and he will pore for hours over tales of wild beasts, savages and African life." The boy's mother tapped her foot nervously. "You discourage this, of course?" she ventured. "You know my wishes!"

"I have tried to," he replied, a slight flush mounting his cheek. "But—your son is very powerful for one so young." After several moments' silence, Lady Greytokes spoke again. "For strong reasons it is very necessary, Mr. Moore, that you do everything in your power to discourage this tendency in Jack—because he is not yet a child, the wild side of the window brought them both to their feet as another wilder one echoed the first.

Then he threw his arms about his mother's neck, kissing her affectionately. "Mother—there's an educated ape in town. It can do everything but talk. All the fellows have seen Ajax. Please can't it?" "We will have to consult your father," evaded Lady Greytokes. "You know I do not approve of such exhibitions." The door opened, admitting a tall, grey-eyed man. "Jack wants to see a trained ape," said Lady Greytokes, looking warningly at her husband.

Associated Gas and Electric Security Holders
Watch for Your Rights!

OCTOBER 31, 1929 holders of record of certain securities in the Associated System are receiving valuable Rights. They represent the right to subscribe to $8 Interest Bearing Allotment Certificates at $120 each to yield 6 2/3%.

What This Investment Means

It means that you have an opportunity to profit through the growth of a soundly established, long continued business supplying light, heat and power—first necessities of civilization.

Growth, through increasing service to customers and through additions of new properties, has doubled Associated System gross earnings and assets during 1927 to 1929.

Full value of the Rights can be realized by exercising them.
Additional Rights may be purchased through security dealers or banks.

These Rights are not cancelled as implied in newspapers but on the contrary the Allotment Certificates have been made more attractive both in price and in terms.

WITNESS the Honorable Samuel H. Sibley,
Judge of said court, at Atlanta, this 27th day of November, 1929.
By F. L. BEERS, Deputy Clerk.
C. MORTIMER MASON, Attorney,
512 Peters Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

FEED PRICES DECLINE
ON SLOWING DEMAND

Prices of most commercial feeds declined during the week ending November 27, largely as the result of a slow demand. Feed grains strengthened slightly but hay markets showed little change, according to the grain, hay and feed market news service of the United States bureau of agricultural economics.

Near wintery weather in more northern sections of the country did not appear to have materially stimulated demand for feed stuffs. Wheat feeds were weaker than most other feeds although prices of hominy feed were about $1 per ton lower than a week ago. High protein feeds averaged lower but gluten feed and alfalfa feeds about unchanged. Spot cottonseed meal was easier with offerings equal to the indifferent demand. Also, the weakness in other feeds was a factor. Offerings of seed in and around Atlanta were very light and of poor quality, on account of recent rains. Trade reports indicate a number of mills were closed down on account of severity of seed.
Offerings of meal at Atlanta were equal to the light demand and 36 per cent protein meal was quoted on November 27, at $33.50-$34.00. 41 per cent protein at $36.50-$37.00 per ton. Demand for hulls showed some improvement and were quoted at $9 per ton, in bulk. Offerings were fairly plentiful at Memphis and with excess of the slack inquiry. Forty-one per cent meal was quoted at that market at $37 and 43 per cent at $40 per ton. Demand for corn was that the corn belt was purchasing meal rather freely, reflecting the improved demand. The corn crop as estimated, November 1, for the corn belt proper showed a material reduction from the 1928 harvest.

Demand Light.
Other feeds were in light demand at the southern markets. Bran was quoted at Atlanta, in carlots, eight draft basis, November 27, at $35-$36; gray shorts, $40.50; red dog, $47.50; hominy feed, $42.50;
corn bran, $29; gluten feed, $46.00; linseed meal, $61.25; and
No. 2 alfalfa meal, $33.75 per ton.
Offerings of mill feeds were fairly liberal at Memphis but buyers were reluctant to anticipate their needs and hard winter wheat bran was quoted at $28; gray shorts at $32.50; $35.50 per ton. Corn bran was scarce but in fair demand and was quoted at $35 per ton.

Prices of feed grains advanced somewhat during the past week, principally as the result of the light offerings. Demand for corn was only of moderate volume and buyers were generally awaiting increased receipts to accumulate. Inquiry for No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at Chicago
November 26 at 87 1/2-88 and at Kansas City at 83-85 1/2-86 per bushel.
No. 3 white corn was selling at the same markets at 44 1/2-45 and 45-46 per bushel, respectively.

Grain Demand Slow.
Demand for feed grains was light in the southeast and No. 2 white oats were quoted at Atlanta November 26 at 61-62 and No. 2 white corn at $1.13 per bushel. No. 2 white oats were quoted at Birmingham at the same date at 60 1/4-61 and No. 2 white corn at $1.10 per bushel.

Hay receipts were hardly equal to the demand in the southern section of the country. A somewhat stronger shipping demand, reflecting the reduction of local forage, was evidenced in this section. Central western shippers were free to quote. No. 1 alfalfa hay for filling orders with the bulk of the shipments going to the south and southeast and an occasional car to the Atlanta section.
U. S. No. 1 alfalfa hay was quoted at Atlanta November 26 at $34-36;
U. S. No. 1 extra leafy, $39-40;
U. S. No. 1 Timothy, $25-26; U. S.
No. 1 Timothy, $21-22; U. S. No. 1
Johnson, $19-20; and U. S. No. 1 clover, $21-22 per ton. Receipts of hay were fairly large at Birmingham and moderate at Atlanta. U. S. No. 1 extra leafy was quoted at that market at $38-40; U. S. No. 1 alfalfa, $36-38; U. S. No. 2 Timothy, $21-22;
and U. S. No. 1 Johnson, $18 per ton.
